Congress Restores Cut in Deficiency Bill

Falangist Dictatorship Is Proclaimed By Franco

Spain Is Made Into Authoritarian State After the Pattern of Germany and Italy

By International News Service

Burgos, Aug. 4.—Gen. Franco today proclaimed Spain to be a one-party Fascist nation with himself the dictator.

A sweeping decree, published in the nationalist official journal, gave to Spain's Fascist party, the Falange Espanola, control over the country's vital departments and policies, domestic and foreign.

By ordering immediate enforcement of a previous edict fusing the traditionalist Carlist party with the Falangists, Franco dealt a death blow to hopes that a king would soon remount the throne of Spain.

Successor a Secret

[It was announced that Franco will appoint his successor secretly, to be revealed only after his death, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

The historic weight of today's decree, which embraced 49 statutes, is bound to be felt beyond the borders of this country, where Franco's final civil war victory last April enabled him to prescribe the national destinies.

In all corners of Burgos' diplomatic colony it was agreed that the creation of a Spanish state modeled after the totalitarian pattern of Germany and Italy presaged a full military union between Spain and the axis alliance. The enormous significance of this to Great Britain and France lies in the unsurpassed strategy of Spain's geographic location—cupping Gibraltar in the south, fringing France on the north, straddling British and French empire communications in the eastern Atlantic and western Mediterranean.

Party Controls All

In today's multiple decree, adopted by the Nationalist Council, of which Franco is president, the Falangist Party was accorded dominance over Spain's foreign policy, education, press and propaganda, women's organizations, social insurance and relief, war veterans' organizations, youth clubs, labor bodies, justice, communication, transport, police and public information service.

Thus, the Falange, nominally led by Franco's brother-in-law, Interior Minister Ramon Serrano Suner, but actually subject to Franco himself, was placed in sole command of the State's principal organs of power.

The council meetings, at which these statutes were adopted, were in progress in Burgos for a week. They capped a shake-up in the army and civil administrations which removed certain leaders reputedly opposed to the Falange and to Italo-German influence, chief of whom was Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, displaced from his post as commander of the second army corps and military governor of Andalusia.

"Isolationists" Lose Out

The council's decisions, reached less than three weeks after Italian Foreign Minister Ciano's visit to Spain and conferences with Franco, represented a complete triumph for the pro-Axis Suner over "isolationists" like de Llano.

As a result of what was already being characterized tonight as "the 49 statutes," Spain is expected to evolve rapidly into the same kind of a state as Germany and Italy, with expansionist policies abroad and a corporative, authoritarian structure at home.

Bill Collector Jailed and Fined On 14 Auto Counts

Conviction on 14 traffic charges placed J. Paul Shelton, 24, of 276 Vine street northwest, in the District Jail yesterday with a 25-day term and a choice between serving an additional 123 days or paying a fine of $228.

Shelton, a bill collector, was sentenced by Judge John P. McMahon after nine policemen confronted him with charges varying from misrepresentation in obtaining a permit, to failure to lock his car while it was unattended.

Shelton was arrested more than a week ago and placed under $200 bond, but he walked out of the court without posting the collateral. He surrendered the next day, claiming that he had left to raise the money. After that he was held in $700 bond.

17,000 Troops Moving Today On Manassas

1,200 Trucks to Roll Through Washington Before Night Falls

(Pictures on Page 11.)

By J. Gilbert Norris.

Citizen motorists, stay off the main highways leading into Washington and northern Virginia today. The Army is moving in.

This being the U. S. A., the above is not a dictator's edict, but a friendly suggestion from Army officials in charge of the concentration of 17,000 National Guard troops near Manassas today. They are encamping on the Bull Run battlefields for two weeks of intensive maneuvers, the largest ever held in this area.

Three-quarters of the khaki-clad guardsmen will roll through the city in more than 1,200 trucks between dawn and dusk today. They will be broken up into 66 convoys, ranging in size from 4 to 40 trucks, to relieve traffic congestion as far as possible, with the heaviest movements between 11 a. m. and noon.

Four Groups to Leave

District National Guardsmen will leave the city in four groups, the first starting from the armory at Sixth and Pennsylvania avenue at 7:30 a. m. The next group will leave a little after 8, and the other two in the early afternoon.

At Groveton, Va., 3 miles this side of Gainesville, on U. S. Route 211, the local troops will pitch camp.

Six Americans Shaken by Blast Of Japanese Bomb

Chungking, Aug. 5 (Saturday) (U.P.).—Six Americans and five other foreigners were shaken up early today when a 500-pound demolition bomb dropped by a Japanese warplane struck near the Belgian embassy.

The explosion knocked them to the ground.

A score of large houses in the vicinity and several automobiles were wrecked. Plaster in the home of C. B. Rape, American Methodist missionary, a quarter mile distant, was knocked off.

Chamberlain Warning

By Frank R. Kelley.

Special Cable to The Post

London, Aug. 4.—Twenty-five years to the day after Great Britain declared war on Germany, Prime Minister Chamberlain turned on Japan, once Britain's ally against imperial Germany, and warned her today that "in certain circumstances" the British "might find it necessary" to dispatch to the Far East a fleet superior to that maintained by the Japanese.

With Japan, after a quarter century, about to cast her lot with Germany and Italy in a military alliance, and with the British patience ebbing under Japanese provocation in China, Chamberlain decided that it was time to stop sending notes and protests to Tokyo and to have a fling at power politics, or, in Anthony Eden's words, to "look tough, talk tough, and act tough."

Declaring that events in the Far East "make my blood boil," Chamberlain surprised Commons in its last session before adjourning until October 3 by serving notice that part of Britain's tremendous naval strength in European waters might be rushed to the Orient unless Tokyo called off its anti-British agitation and propaganda in Japanese-controlled areas of China.

Not a Threat, Just a Warning

Without disclosing how Britain could spare her much-needed warships from troubled Europe, Chamberlain added sternly:

"I hope no one will think that it is absolutely out of the question that such circumstances will arise."

In the next breath he softened the blow, saying:

"At the same time I do not mean that as a threat; only as a warning. We would much rather settle our differences with the Japanese by discussion and negotiation, provided we can do so without sacrificing what we conceive to be fundamental considerations or principles, than by threat of force."

Cautiously, Chamberlain sidestepped any threat of economic sanctions against Japan, such as might be foreshadowed if Britain followed the lead of the United States and denounced the Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty of 1911.

"I want this House to bear in mind," he said, "that the situation of this country is particularly different. Sometimes I hear honorable members say, 'Why don't we do what the United States does?' It is hardly necessary for me to point out the fundamental difference between the United States and its isolation from Europe with that of this country."

"Would Have to Go to War"

Chamberlain reminded his audience, which included the Russian and Chinese Ambassadors in the gallery, that Britain was heavily committed in Europe "by force of circumstances" and "if certain things were to happen, this country would have to go to war."

"It would be possible to undertake the same commitments in the

Czech Exile Says He'll Follow Wife and Two Sons in Suicide

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Karel Langer, once-wealthy Czecho-Slovakian refugee, almost collapsed today when they told him that his wife and two small children had plunged from a thirteenth-floor hotel window to their deaths which a coroner's jury blamed on Nazi "persecution."

He clutched at his head, then leaped to his feet and shook the interpreter until his teeth rattled. Then he drew two fingers across his throat and with tears streaming down his cheeks said:

"Tomorrow, me too."

Other members of the little colony of Czecho-Slovakian Jews believed tonight he would carry out his threat.

Miss Hermine Weil, aunt of Langer's wife, said it would do no good for police to guard Langer.

"They might as well let him commit suicide now, too," she said. "He'll do it anyway."

[The city news bureau stated its reporters, while investigating the case, learned that a group of refugees of various faiths and nationalities and all living here on temporary visas had formed what its members

Speaking Of Genesis

The primary election in Kentucky today is the first under which the newly enacted Hatch law, to prevent "pernicious political activities," will be operative. And, by not unnatural coincidence, it was the last Kentucky primary, in which Senator Barkley defeated Gov. Chandler for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, which opened the road for this far-reaching legislation.

President Roosevelt was not wholly accurate in saying, in his message to Congress on Wednesday approving the Hatch bill, that: "The genesis of this legislation lies in the message of the President of January 5, 1939, respecting an additional appropriation for the Works Progress Administration."

The genesis of the Hatch law is actually to be found in an editorial in The Washington Post of April 18, 1938, written nearly nine months before that Executive request for statutory regulations to eliminate "improper political practices." Senator Hatch himself graciously gave The Post full credit in a speech on the floor of the Senate on July 29. "I do not forget," he said, "that the idea of applying the civil service rule to prohibit political activities by employes in the nonclassified civil service came from an editorial which appeared in The Washington Post more than a year ago."

The editorial from which the Hatch law evolved was entitled "Patronage and Politics" and was written by Merlo J. Pusey of The Post's editorial staff. It considered the Senate defeat of a bill, sponsored by Senators Hatch and Steiwer, which was designed to prohibit Federal employes from attending political conventions as delegates.

At the time of the defeat of this bill the Kentucky primary race between Senator Barkley and Gov. Chandler was much in the public eye. Senator Barkley had the support of a powerful machine which utilized Federal employes, while Gov. Chandler was supported by a scarcely less powerful organization built up on State and local jobholders. In noting the Senate's consideration of this situation The Post editorial of April 18, 1938, said:

"To deny members of Congress assistance from political machines composed of Federal employes would put them at a disadvantage in contests with Governors using machines of State employes. Majority Leader Barkley's race with Gov. Chandler for the Democratic nomination for Senator from Kentucky gave particular emphasis to this contention. Apparently the Senate voted to save its majority leader from unfair competition."

Continuing with its analysis, The Post editorial pointed out that "the worthy purpose" of the Hatch-Steiwer bill was "to prevent the packing of political conventions to keep an individual or an administration in power." No politician, the editorial continued, "should have a right thus to use public servants for his own political advantage. Nor should the will of the rank and file attending conventions be thwarted by an influx of officeholders controlled by patronage. Certainly some action is in order to curb these abuses."

The editorial then concluded that the approach utilized by Senators Steiwer and Hatch should be broadened. "The real objective," said The Post, on April 18, 1938, "should be to divorce Government employes in nonpolicy-making positions from active participation in all partisan politics . . . By using this approach to his objective Mr. Hatch would have an opportunity to press his point a second time—perhaps with more success."

It was precisely this procedure, as Senator Hatch has generously made clear, which he adopted in his bill enacted this week, to make applicable to unclassified employes the civil service regulations against improper political activities.

The Post acknowledges with gratitude the tribute paid to it by Senator Hatch in connection with the accomplishment of this important reform. It takes occasion to pledge continued assistance in forthcoming efforts to develop a wholly nonpolitical civil service—efforts which the Hatch law has made much easier but by no means superfluous.

Home Owners' Interest Cut

HOLC Action Expected To Save Borrowers $5,000,000 a Year

By the Associated Press

The Home Owners Loan Corporation, which has on its books about $2,400,000,000 in loans made to distressed home owners, yesterday cut its interest rate on much of this money from 5 to 4½ per cent.

At the same time, Congress sent to the White House a bill prolonging the amortization period on HOLC loans from 15 to 25 years.

The double action followed persistent efforts in Congress and out for better terms for the HOLC borrowers. On Monday, the Federal Housing Administration announced a cut, from 5 to 4½ per cent, in interest rates on small home mortgages issued by it.

Light Kentucky Vote Forecast

Arnett Asks Protection Of Hatch Law in Race For Governorship

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 4.—Kentucky political observers are expecting a lighter vote than last year in tomorrow's primaries because candidates have been unable to whip up their campaigns to the usual fever heat

Last summer when Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley and Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler battled it out for Barkley's Senate seat President Roosevelt came to Kentucky and urged the Senator's renomination. More than 510,000 votes were cast in this primary with Barkley winning by a 71,000 majority.

Then the New Deal was an issue and a hot one. This year the same issue was raised but without the

The condemned authors included Casanova, Balzac, Bocaccio, Rabelais, Voltaire, Poe, Edgar Wallace, Thomas Mann, Arnold Zweig, Emil Ludwig, H. G. Wells, Franz Werfel, Robert Graves, Machiavelli, Jacob Wasserman, Agatha Christie, George Sande, Axel Munthe and Arthur Schnitzler.

New York, Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Sophie Tucker, veteran trouper known as "the last of the red hot mamas," was ruled off stage and radio today by Equity Association and the Radio Artists Federation pending a hearing August 22.

Miss Tucker was president of the American Federation of Actors (A.F.L.), Variety Union whose charter the parent Associated Actors and Artistes of America revoked several weeks ago on charges of executive mismanagement. When the A.A.A.A. set up a rival organization, Miss Tucker's A. F. A. declared war.

High Federal Officials Hit By Hatch Act

Murphy Rules Law Applies to District Attorneys, Judges, Marshals, Others

Under the Hatch law high-ranking Federal jobholders must quit before they campaign for elective office at home Attorney General Murphy ruled yesterday.

He advised two United States district attorneys and an assistant district attorney, all seeking election at home, they must give up their new ambitions or their old jobs. Those notified were:

United States District Attorney Charles F. Uhl, of Pittsburgh, candidate for a State office.

Uhl Says He'll Resign

Assistant United States District Attorney John D. Ray, of Pittsburgh, also seeking a State office.

United States District Attorney Joseph B. Frazier, jr., of Chattanooga, Tenn., candidate to succeed the late Representative Sam D. McReynolds in Congress.

Uhl had announced he would resign before seeking a State judgeship.

The ruling said Murphy "had been informed" Uhl and Ray were candidates for State offices. Frazier, it said, informed the Attorney General he would seek election to complete McReynolds' unexpired term.

Murphy advised them, the Department of Justice said, that "by reason of provisions of Section 9-A of the Hatch act, they cannot campaign for State offices and retain their Federal positions."

The ruling, it was said, would apply to United States marshals, collectors of customs, Federal judges and other appointive officials on the Federal pay roll.

Reports reached Washington, meanwhile, from scattered sections of the country, the Associated Press said, indicating that most Federal jobholders appeared ready to sacrifice possibilities of local political preferment in favor of their status quo. Philadelphia seemed the exception. Some 50 persons holding minor Federal jobs there were reported leaving them to seek State offices.

Gov. Price Interested

At Denver, Colo., a half-dozen Federal employes, including a United States district attorney, dropped their connections with local political organizations, at least two postmasters in New York State did the same.

Mrs. Jennie Kirby, Democratic National Committeewoman for New Mexico, resigned because, she said, it conflicted with her job as director of the State's department of public welfare.

President Roosevelt's suggestion, which accompanied his signature of the Hatch bill, that States enact similar legislation covering their own employes, awakened interest in at least one quarter. Gov. James Price, of Virginia, said he was "looking into" the idea.

Murphy's notification to Federal district attorneys was the first under the new law, which prohibits political activity by all Federal officers except the President, members of his Cabinet, members of Congress and officials in policy-forming capacities.

Flood of Protests

One result of the bill's enactment was to bring a flood of protests and requests for interpretation from counties abutting Washington in Maryland and Virginia. There, many local officials and persons active in local politics are Government employes and residents wondered if the bill meant a wholesale exodus from one status or the other.

Mother Gets Back Thorne Baby After Nurse Plays 'Hide-Seek'

Barbara Alicia Thorne, 4-month-old stake of a bitter District Court custody battle, returned to her mother's arms last night after her frightened nurse played hide-and-seek with a deputy marshal for nearly an hour among the crowds at Union Station.

The nurse defied officers and three lawyers, clinging to the baby as she fled down the passenger platform, through the waiting room, back to the platform and finally took refuge in the station master's office.

Scores of persons mingled in the chase, asking whether a robbery, a kidnaping or a riot was going on.

Even after she gave up the child, the nurse refused to tell her name.

The baby is the child of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thorne, of East Riverdale, Md. She was sent back to Washington by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tilt, wealthy Greenwich, Conn., couple, when they found out that the Thornes had sued a Washington child adoption agent to recover their daughter.

Mrs. Annie L. Glover has been placing children for adoption for 20 years, handling a great many, and has lost money at it, according to her lawyer, Homer L. McCormick. Justice Goldsborough, Thursday, gave her until Tuesday to have the Thorne

Favorite-Son Boom Gaining For Tydings

Baltimore's Calvert Club Indorses Him For Presidency

By Edward T. Folliard

The movement to make Senator Millard E. Tydings a favorite-son candidate of Maryland at the 1940 Democratic National Convention gained headway yesterday when Baltimore's Calvert Club boomed him for the Presidential nomination.

Previously, two other Tydings-for-President clubs had been formed, one in North Beach and the other in Prince Georges County.

Assuming he should get the Free State's indorsement, Tydings would go into the 1940 convention with a heavy handicap. That handicap—which weighted down the late Albert C. Ritchie—is the circumstance that Maryland has only eight votes in the electoral college.

"Purge" May Prove Boomerang

However, a Tydings-for-President delegation to the 1940 convention would be an important factor in the political picture. Considering how President Roosevelt tried to read Tydings out of the party in last year's "purge" campaign, it is not likely such a delegation would favor a third term for the President, or approve a hand-picked New Dealer.

The Ritchie delegation that went to the Chicago convention in 1932 was an integral part of the "stop-Roosevelt" bloc.

The current Tydings-for-Presi-

Toothache Attacks Endurance Flier Aloft 293 Hours

Springfield, Ill., Aug 4 (A.P.).—The Moody brothers approached 300 hours of continuous flying tonight, beginning their thirteenth day in the air.

Humphrey Moody, 20-year-old member of the team which already has far surpassed the old record of 218 hours for light planes, developed a toothache that caused concern among members of the ground crew. Later he said he felt "better" after applying a temporary remedy sent aloft during a refueling contact. The brothers had been aloft 293 hours at 9 p. m. (EST) today.

Way Cleared To Adjourn Today by Both Houses

La Follette Inquiry Extended, Theater Project Is Killed In Long Session

By Robert C. Albright

The Seventy-Sixth Congress working at top speed last night swept all major legislation to the point of final passage, then held its breath lest pointed last-minute controversies endanger adjournment today.

Passed by the Senate and sent to conference was the third and last deficiency bill, but in a form that brought loud protests from the House economy bloc. Restored to the bill was the $119,000,000 Commodity Credit Corporation item requested by the President and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to maintain farm prices.

Part of $136,000,000 in increases approved by the Senate, the $119,000,000 fund must run the gauntlet of a conference committee and a House that recently rejected it before the adjournment gong sounds.

Connally to Protest

Still another hurdle must be hopped in Senate approval of the belated conference agreement on the Administration's liberalizing social security amendments. The House approved the report yesterday and the Senate is expected to follow suit, but not before a sharp protest is voiced by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas. The conferees had stricken the Connally amendment, guaranteeing two-third Federal contributions toward the $15 of old-age assistance payments.

Recognizing the futility of trying for sine die adjournment last night, the House called a halt at 6 p. m., but Senate lights burned until 10:30 p. m. before a recess was called. Majority Leader Barkley expected a final leave-taking late this afternoon.

For hours a Senate controversy raged on the Civil Liberties Committee's request for $100,000 in additional funds to continue its investigation of the Associated Farmers of California and others.

The Senate finally approved $50,000 for the inquiry, the amount recommended by its Audit and Control Committee. The vote was 36-17.

Money Inquiry Voted

However, a resolution by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, for a $25,000 Senate Banking Committee investigation of national monetary policies was quickly approved with no debate. Wagner said the inquiry would be launched in October, and embrace every phase of the money problem.

A host of threatening riders to the deficiency measure, that House members had warned would hold up adjournment, were tossed aside under a Senate rule requiring a two-thirds vote to place legislation on an appropriation bill.

Thus meeting defeat was the WPA prevailing wage amendment, an effort to remove the 18-month restriction on continuous WPA employment, an attempt to revive Federal theater projects, and a liberal farm bloc proposal to scale down the debts of farmers unable to meet payments on mortgages.

Theater Project Loses

Last to fall by the wayside was the Federal theater project amendment of Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, rejected by a vote of 18 to 42.

Pepper later succeeded in restoring the wages and hours administration appropriations to the full $2,000,000 budget estimate, after the House had first eliminated this item altogether and later restored half.

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, failed in an attempt to enlarge the authorization for public buildings by $50,000,000. The Sen-

U. S. Extends Trade Pact With Russia

Soviet Promises to Buy $40,000,000 of Goods in 12 Months

The United States and Soviet Russia agreed yesterday to continue in effect an understanding whereby Russia will buy a minimum of $40,000,000 in American goods in the next 12 months and the United States will accord Russia the same tariff reductions as countries with which it has trade agreements.

The State Department released the texts of notes between the Soviet commissar for foreign trade, A. I. Mikoyan, and Stuart E. Grummon, American charge d'affaires at Moscow, which put the extension of the agreement into effect Sunday, August 6.

With respect to Soviet coal shipments to the United States, Russia agreed to restrict its exports in the next 12 months to 400,000 tons. This was considered necessary because of the coal-tax provisions of the revenue act of 1932. During the 1937-1938 agreement year, imports of Soviet coal int othe United States were 198,384 tons and in the first nine months of the 1938-1939 agreement year, 134,154 tons.

More Than $40,000,000 Expected

Although the pact sets $40,000,000 as the minimum Soviet purchases here, officials forecast Soviet orders in excess of this sum. They base their predictions on performances of the last two years.

"The successive commercial agreements between the United States and the Union of Soviet Socalist Republics," said the State Department, "have provided a basis for the gratifying expansion of trade between the two countries which has taken place in response to a number of favorable factors."

Soviet purchases here in the 1937-1938 treaty year were $65,394,000. In the first 11 months of the 1938-1939 agreement year they were $58,700,000. In 1933 Soviet purchases here had reached a low of $10,674,000 from a high of $136,162,000 in 1930.

Imports Increased

"The Soviet Union has profited under the successive commercial agreements," the State Department also said. "United States imports from the Soviet Union have increased steadily from the low of less than $10,000,000 in 1932 to $27,000,000 in the calendar year 1937."

Four-fifths of United States exports to Russia consist of machinery and vehicles used in Russia's industrialization of militarization program. America also sold in 1938 $5,000,000 worth of non-metallic minerals and $2,000,000 worth of high-grade gasoline for aircraft engines.

Furs form the largest item of Russian sales to the United States—$13,000,000 in 1938. Other important imports from Russia are flax fabrics and non-metallic minerals such as anthracite and asbestos. Russia is the largest supplier of sausage casings to the United States—$400,000 worth. Unusual items of import are crabmeat sauce and paste, $522,000; caviar, $181,000, and bristles for brushes, $100,000.

House Act Recalls Crime Career of Tri-State Gang

By the Associated Press

A closing chapter in the history of the notorious tri-State gang, which five years ago terrorized the Middle Atlantic States, was written yesterday in a prosaic act of Congress.

The House passed and sent to the White House a bill to pay the Epes Transportation Co., of Petersburg and Blackstone, Va., $6,537.95 in repayment of taxes and penalty assessed against tobacco and cigarettes stolen from one of the company's trucks by the gang on April 4, 1934.

The tri-State gang was headed by Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, who were electrocuted in Richmond on charges of murder.

heat of 1938. Although the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. have created a stir by backing opposing candidates, even this issue hasn't grown to large proportions in interest.

There are four Democratic and four Republican candidates for Governor.

On the Democratic side Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson, supported by Gov. Chandler's administration forces, and John Young Brown, former Congressman, who claims New Deal backing, appear the leaders in pre-primary interest.

Brown is an attorney for the United Mine Workers in the State and Johnson has been charging that the election of Brown will mean backing for John L. Lewis. Johnson has been indorsed by the State organization of the A. F. of L.

Charles D. Arnett, secretary of State, jumped into the limelight when he asked Federal "protection" under the new Hatch law, charging he was being illegally harassed by use of the WPA." The Kentucky primaries are the first since the passage of the Hatch act prohibiting most Federal employes from political activity in elections.

Ulysses G. Foster of Harlan County is the fourth Democratic candidate.

The Republicans have centered their attention on John Sherman Cooper, a Somerset lawyer, and King Swope, Lexington Circuit judge and frequent campaigner. G. Tom Hawkins and L. O. Smith, Mayor of Harlan, are the other competing Republicans.

Both parties have candidates for Lieutenant Governor, State treasurer, auditor, superintendent of public instruction, commissioner of agriculture, attorney general, the entire State House of Representatives and half of the Senate.

There was a possibility that it might be several days before the major races are decided, if the results are close, due to Kentucky's delayed counting. The polls open at 6 a. m. and close at 4 p. m., local time, but tabulating does not start until an hour after the close and it must stop at midnight until 9 a. m. Monday. There were indications that the usual long count in Louisville might not be finished until Thursday or Friday of next week.

River Projects Apportioned By Roosevelt

Rule of Thumb Halts Dispute of Army and Reclamation Bureau

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had solved a controversy between the Army Engineers and the Reclamation Bureau over construction of river projects by apportioning the work of each agency according to a rule of thumb.

Asked about the controversy at his press conference, he explained the new arrangement had been worked out through conferences.

Reports on projects by one agency, he said, are checked by the other in the light of its particular work. The system, he declared, is excellent from the standpoint of results.

How Projects are Divided

The Army engineers, the President pointed out, construct all harbor projects, as well as all Mississippi River improvements—and all projects whose function relates mainly to flood control or navigation. Projects on the upper reaches of rivers, having to do mainly with irrigation and reclamation, he explained, are allotted to the Reclamation Bureau.

In cases where the junction of a project is about half flood control and half irrigation, he said, the bureau usually handles it, unless the volume of its work otherwise would be too great.

The whole question, Mr. Roosevelt said, goes back to the original study of the Government reorganization plan about two years ago. At that time, he recalled, both agencies were building the larger type dams. The Reclamation Bureau was constructing Boulder Dam and Grand Coulee, and the Army engineers Fort Peck and Bonnneville.

Equal Importance Aim

Although the rivalry was at first regarded as healthy, this situation necessitated some adjustment, he explained, in order that neither agency should overwhelm the other. Care had to be taken that the engineers, whose primary function is military, did not grow out of bounds, since in case of war they would have to be called to the front.

The new arrangement, Mr. Roosevelt said, will keep the Reclamation Bureau going on a basis of equal importance with the engineers.

5 Langdon School Boys Pass Swimming Tests

Five boys of the Langdon School for Crippled Children will receive special awards at 1:30 p. m. today in the boys' department of the Central Y. M. C. A. for having passed swimming tests. The boys are members of the group of 14 who have been receiving swimming lessons weekly.

Traffic Police to Be Increased At Capital's Danger Corners

Thirteen precinct police captains were advised by Traffic Inspector W. E. Holmes yesterday to increase police details in the zones where the greatest number of child traffic injuries have occurred.

Meeting in Inspector Holmes' office the captains were shown 15 "spot street maps" by the traffic advisory council, which reveal the exact position of each of the 865 traffic injuries suffered by children under 15 years of age in 1938.

Precinct maps will be placed at each station house so the personnel can study concentration of child injuries.

District traffic fatalities for 1939 are six below the total at the same time last year, Inspector Holmes said. He ascribed this decrease to "the stringent, but courteous enforcement of pedestrian control regulations."

Schreiver said that the number of child injuries has doubled in the last ten years.

Senate Passes Deficiency Bill

ate accepted a later amendment by Mead for an additional $1,000,000 public buildings appropriation.

Before adjournment of the House overnight, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, obtained unanimous consent for sending the deficiency bill to conference as soon as the Senate completes it, slated a conference meeting this morning, and promised to have a report before the House when it meets at noon.

A last economy fight was scheduled for the closing day when the Senate by a vote of 61 to 7 wrote back into the deficiency bill the $119,000,000 which Wallace said is necessary if farm prices are not to drop back to 1932 levels. The House had trimmed this and some $42,000,000 more from the bill.

Working feverishly through the early morning hours, the Senate Appropriations Committee had returned the $119,000,000 and many other House prunings to the bill, including another $1,000,000 sought for the administration of the wage-hour law. Without a printed report, their recommendations were sped to the Senate floor.

Two other major House cuts restored by the Senate were:

A $7,500,000 increase for Social Security Board's grants to States for unemployment compensation. The House had voted only $12,500,000 of the $20,000,000 budget estimate.

An increase to $5,675,000 in the fund for training civilian pilots by the Civil Aeronautics Authority, against only $3,000,000 provided by the House.

While House members loafed, efforts of urban relief bloc Senators to eliminate salient relief act modifications through a series of riders were repulsed with staccato precision through a busy afternoon Senate session.

First to go down was the McCarran amendment, designed to restore prevailing (union) wage scales on WPA projects, chief target of WPA labor troubles and strikes that have not yet subsided.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, a prevailing wage advocate, nonetheless made a point of order against the amendment. He explained that he was duty bound as chairman of the appropriations sub-committee to object to a rider not germane to the bill. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, prevailing wage author, immediately moved to suspend the Senate rules to make his amendment in order. A two-thirds majority was needed, and McCarran lost on a 40-to-31 vote.

The Nevadan immediately followed with an amendment to smooth out WPA wage differentials, vigorously opposed by Southern members. Again he lost by a similar vote.

Next relief bloc move was on the Murray amendment, which would virtually repeal the relief act requirement that workers more than 18 months on relief rolls must take three-month furloughs to make way for those who had been long in the waiting line.

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, again quoted Work Relief Commissioner Harrington to the effect that 650,000 must be removed from the rolls by August 31 if his amendment failed.

Before the Murray rules suspension motion went to a vote, McCarran served notice that if it succeeded, he would again offer his prevailing wage rider as part of the Murray plan. Vainly, Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, sought to persuade him not to, charging it would endanger the Murray maneuver. A vote was ordered, and the 18-month relief roll rotation principle was sustained, Murray failing to change it by a 38-to-31 vote.

House Votes Liberalized Security Act

Senate Expected to Assent to Freezing Pay Roll Tax at 1%

Without a word of dissent, the House yesterday gave speedy approval to amendments to the social security act liberalizing benefits and saving $905,000,000 in taxes during the next three years.

The House acted a few hours after the Senate-House conference, spurred on by the whip of adjournment, had broken a two-week deadlock to bring out a compromise bill.

The conference report, which the Senate is expected to indorse and send to the White House today, freezes pay-roll taxes at 1 per cent for 1940, 1941 and 1942. It advances the date for beginning payments on old-age benefits to January 1, 1940, and greatly broadens the coverage of the old-age insurance system.

Of the three major points in dispute between the Senate and House, the conferees resolved two in favor of the Senate and one in favor of the House.

Over the protests of Senators Connally, of Texas, and Harrison, of Mississippi, who refused to sign the report, the other conferees agreed to eliminate the Connally amendment, which would require the Federal Government to pay $2 for every $1 contributed by the States, up to a total of $15.

Harrison said he withheld his signature because the House conferees refused to take the Connally amendment back to the House for a separate vote. In the conference committee, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, also lined up with Harrison and Connally, but he ultimately signed the report.

As against this defeat for the Senate, the House accepted the La Follette amendment, which doubles the number of persons who will qualify for old-age insurance benefits next year by bringing under the act all those who reached the age of 65 prior to January 1, 1939. This increase will cost a total of $695,000,000 for the next 15 years, to be paid out of the pay roll tax.

Furthermore, the House agreed to knock out of the bill a House provision permitting States with adequate reserves and minimum benefit standards to reduce their pay roll tax.

House acceptance of the conference report was whipped through so rapidly by Speaker Bankhead that it left spectators gasping.

Doughton Congratulated

Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the committee, told the House that the most important feature of the bill was the provision freezing the pay roll tax, which, he said, involved a saving of $275,000,000 for 1940, or $825,000,000 for the next three years. He congratulated Doughton and then he, too, sat down.

"Without objection, the conference report is agreed to," rapped out Speaker Bankhead, as numerous Representatives rushed over to felicitate Doughton and other members of the conference committee.

In addition to freezing the pay roll tax, the bill makes only the first $3,000 of an employe's salary liable to taxation for unemployment compensation. This provision is expected to save employers about $65,000,000 annually. Certain refunds totaling about $15,000,000 are also included in the measure.

Besides advancing the date for beginning old-age benefit payments to next January 1, the bill liberalizes benefits and extends them to aged wives, widows, children and aged dependent parents, with the result that about $2,093,000,000 will be disbursed during 1940-44, $1,500,000,000 more than provided in present law.

Seamen, bank employes and employed persons 65 years old and over are brought under the old-age insurance system. The conference reports specifically exempts children under 18 who deliver newspapers and shopping news.

Considerable increases are ordered for Federal grants to States for maternal and child health services, for crippled children, for vocational rehabilitation work and for public health work.

A Senate amendment that would have excluded Indians from old-age assistance was knocked out in conference, as was another amendment setting up an advisory council on unemployment insurance.

House Votes $1,338,000 to Reimburse Ohio For Social Security Funds Withheld in 1938

The House yesterday passed without debate and sent to the Senate the Jenkins bill authorizing a $1,338,000 reimbursement to the State of Ohio for social security funds withheld last October because of charges of politics in the State's old-age pension system.

JENKINS

The measure is opposed by Chairman A. J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board, who made the original ruling withholding the funds.

The House passed and sent to the Senate legislation intended to curtail operations of gambling ships off the West Coast.

The bill would provide stiff fines and imprisonment for the maintenance of gambling ships within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction of the United States.

The Senate Appropriations Committee provided $2,010,000 for payment to the government of Panama under a recently concluded agreement with the United States.

The money is rent for the Canal Zone. Resumption of service by the Panamian government on dollar bonds held in this country depends on final Senate and House approval of the $2,010,000 fund.

The Senate passed a House bill permitting the Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase $1,300,000 in fish products to cut down surpluses. Senator Danaher (Republican), Connecticut, sought unsuccessfully to limit the authority to prevent buying of canned fish products.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, left Washington yesterday for New York, to sail today with his daughter, Miss Frances J. Reynolds, for Europe, where Miss Reynolds has been studying since last November. The Senator expected to remain abroad for several months, and has canceled a number of speaking engagements because of the recent death of his mother.

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, sailed for Oslo, Norway, today on the maiden trip of the new steamer Mormachawk. His brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chase, were also passengers. Senator Holt is a delegate to the Inter-Parliamentary Union Congress in Oslo.

Civil Liberties Inquiry Gets $50,000 More

Thomas, of Utah, and Johnson Clash in 2-Hour Senate Debate

After a two-hour debate marked by frayed tempers and ragged nerves, the Senate last night voted the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee $50,000 to continue its work, including an investigation of the Associated Farmers of California.

In an angry clash with Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, one of two members of the committee, Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, criticized activities of the investigating group and demanded that a third member, "with a different philosophy," be added.

Thomas objected that Johnson had implied the committee had been unfair to witnesses.

"Don't put words in my mouth!" interrupted the Californian.

Thomas Retorts

"No; but I'll take words out of the Senator's mouth," retorted Thomas, evidently maintaining his customary academic calm with some difficulty. "The implications of the Senator from California are the kind that I resent."

To Thomas' insistence that the committee had been fair, Johnson snapped back: "I accept the Senator's statement, I hope it is carried out that way. I will recall his words to him if it isn't."

Johnson agreed with Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, that grand juries could carry on the investigations, and he added:

"If there's anything in California that doesn't smell good or any organization that deprives men of their civil liberties, I'll fight to prevent such a thing and unite with the Senators from Wisconsin and Utah."

Asks "Square Deal"

Asserting that the few members of the Associated Farmers whom he knew were "hard-working American citizens," Johnson roared, "For God's sake, gentlemen, give him a square deal; if he's wrong, let's punish him—but if he's right, for the love of God say that he's right."

After Majority Leader Barkley had enthusiastically praised the work of the La Follette Committee in Harlan County, Ky., Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolini, rose to his feet.

At great length "Cotton Ed," of the walrus mustache, declaimed against the "snooping committee" in particular and "State socialism" in general. When he had finished, Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, announced that he had originally been in agreement with Smith, but after hearing his speech had switched over to the other side.

"What in the name of God have we come to," cried Smith, "that we should select a snooping committee to go around and inquire if somebody has interfered with civil liberties?"

$100,000 Requested

The resolution extending the life of the committee had been originally introduced by Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, with a request for $100,000, which the Committee on Audit and control cut down to $50,000.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, asked for the full amount, pointing out that $50,000 was insufficient to make the complete investigation he thought the Senate would expect. He asserted that the inquiry would be "very difficult and arduous."

Belief that the long-existing vacancy on the Civil Liberties Committee should be filled was expressed by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska. "Both Senators are dear to us," he declared, "but they are Senators who have a certain philosophy, to which I find myself often opposed." Burke urged that the Department of Justice should undertake an investigation of the Associated Farmers, "if they have done anything wrong."

'Hains Point' Painting Chosen Best Picture

"Hains Point," a water color by Robert Gates, of McLean, Va., has been selected as the outstanding picture at the Whyte Gallery, 1707 H street northwest, where it is being shown in the first summer exhibition of paintings by artists of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia.

"Girl With Red Fower," portrait by Nicolai Cikovsky, received the greatest popular vote. The exhibition will continue through August 31.

U. S. Cash Paid For Tear Gas, Bridges Says

Harbor Employers Bought Weapon With Subsidies, He Avers

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 4.—Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. director, said today the Government had furnished money with which waterfront employers purchased tear gas fired at workers in the 1934 coast-wide port tieup.

He made the accusation in telling of his labor activities after two and one-half days of answering questions at his deportation hearing regarding his belief in Government ownership of industry and his attitude toward communism.

"It is a matter of record that the greatest purchases of tear gas in 1934 were made by waterfront employers of the Pacific," said the Australian-born labor leader fighting deportation on charges he is a Communist. "They were bought with money furnished by the Government as subsidies."

Tells of Killings

In his first show of emotion on the witness stand, Bridges told of the killing of two pickets during the strike.

"A majority of the 400 men who were shot were shot in the back and the two men who were killed were shot in the back," he declared. "It was a deliberate plan to murder by the police and we have never forgotten it."

He said he suspected police connivance in vigilante raids which followed the end of San Francisco's general strike, called after the shootings. The police arrived 20 minutes after each vigilante raid "and arrested everyone who was lying around unconscious," he asserted.

Dies Witness to Testify

After telling his own life history Bridges was excused from the stand and the defense said it would call Harper Knowles, a witness before the Dies Committee investigating into un-American activity, Monday in an effort to show improper inducement to witnesses to testify against Bridges.

In explaining his views to Government attorneys on ownership of private property Bridges declared "there is lots of room for a lot more public ownership, or Government ownership." He added:

"I don't see why a handful of individuals should control enormous tracts of land here, why they should control all the public utilities; I don't see why they should control the railroads or the oil wells or any of the natural resources of the country.

"Private property, in the sense as you describe it to me, I take to mean the big utilities, the big factories, the big industrial plants.

"And I am in favor of Government ownership of those things. Yes, and if the Government can't make a better job of running them and paying something more to the people that work in them than private industry has, then I would say give it back to private industry again."

Sharp Rise Noted In Cotton Exports

The Agricultural Department reported yesterday a sharp increase in foreign sales of American cotton since it inaugurated a subsidy program designed to double exports.

Sales between July 27, when the program was started, and August 1 were 172,747 bales of lint cotton and 1,037,000 pounds of cotton products. The subsidy rate is 1½ cents a pound on lint cotton and between 1 and 2.1 cents a pound on cotton products.

Exports in recent months have been averaging less than 50,000 bales a week.

Congress Votes More Millions For Defense

House Authorizes Spare Canal Locks; Dirigible Funds Cut

On the even of adjournment, a Congress that has provided more money for military and naval preparation than any other peacetime national Legislature, voted additional millions for defense.

The House passed and sent to the White House a measure authorizing construction of a spare set of locks for the Panama Canal, and the Senate approved a final appropriation bill, carrying $73,993,021 for defense purposes. The additional Canal locks, to cost $277,000,000, were asked by the Administration to assure that the vital artery would be open to the fleet in event of war.

More than five millions were added to the deficiency supply bill in the Senate for defense needs. The Senators restored a $2,675,000 cut made by the House in the civil air pilot training program, designed to provide a "back-log" of partially trained airmen for use in emergency. Allowing $5,675,000 for the program, a total of 15,000 college students will be given flight instruction this fall if the House agrees to the addition.

Dirigible Funds Eliminated

The Senate also added $2,500,000 for purchase of two merchant vessels and their conversion as naval auxiliaries. It eliminated funds, however, for construction of a naval dirigible, allowed by the House.

Of the total carried in the bill for defense, $33,045,501 is in cash and the remainder in contract authorization. No changes were made in the House provisions for Navy shore construction, Army air bases, and construction of a military highway in Panama. The House action in cutting budget estimates for strategic war materials from $25,000,000 to $10,000,000 was approved.

Also approved was the House action in providing funds for a $10,000,000 air research laboratory. Final passage of the measure will bring the total defense funds voted at the present session to above $1,850,000,000.

Leiserson Balks At Labor Board Films Complaint

By the United Press.

The split within the National Labor Relations Board widened last night as it was disclosed that the newest member, William M. Leiserson, had declined to sign an amended complaint alleging eight major motion picture companies were violating the Wagner act by discriminating against members of the Screen Writers Guild, Inc.

Observers could not recall another instance in the board's three-year history when a member refused to sign a complaint, which is a preliminary to holding a hearing and determining whether a law violation has occurred.

Companies named in the complaint were Universal Pictures Co., Inc.; Selznick International Pictures, Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Loew's Inc.; Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Columbia Pictures Corporation of California, Ltd., and Paramount Pictures, Inc. A hearing was ordered in Los Angeles August 17.

10 in Congress Ask End of 'Milk Trust'

Petition Presented to Murphy Urging U. S. Dissolve Two Firms

By the Associated Press

Ten members of Congress asked Attorney General Murphy yesterday to break up what they described as a dairy monopoly exercised by the National Dairy Products Corporation and the Borden Co. of New York.

The group presented a petition asking that the Justice Department seek a decree for the dissolution of the two corporations "into their original local constituent parts and subsidiaries" with provision for the administration of the parts and subsidiaries by local directors and officials not related to or connected with any holding, directing or any other companies.

The petition said the purpose of the proceeding was "to end by orders of the court, including preliminary injunctions, the abuses, monopoly powers and destructive influences now exercised by said corporations over 12,000,000 people of the farm dependent upon the dairy industry, and 70,000,000 urban consumers.

Signers who conferred with the Attorney General were Representatives Culkin (Republican), of New York; Smith (Republican), of Maine; Gehrmann (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Bolles (Republican) of Wisconsin; Oliver (Republican), of Maine; Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota; Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin; Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon; Buckler (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

Culkin said the Attorney General expressed "sympathetic interest" and arranged a conference for them with Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, in charge of the department's antitrust division, for next Monday.

Schulte Asks D. C. To Allow Milk Imports

The District Commissioners were asked yesterday by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, to issue an emergency order putting into effect measures governing importation of milk, which failed to pass the House.

Addressing a three-page letter to Commissioner George E. Allen, Schulte charged the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association is trying to persuade farmers not to sell milk to the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy.

Schulte suggested the Commissioners might issue a blanket permit for importation of milk and cream by local dairies under terms of the United States Public Health Service code, providing the milk is measured when received, and complies with the bacterial restrictions.

While the Commissioners were not available for comment immediately, there appeared no likelihood that the order will be issued, as they and the health officer opposed the Schulte bill.

Guardsmen Start For Bull Run

Maryland and Virginia guardsmen, the remainder of the Blue and Gray (Twenty-ninth) Division, will be close by. Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Twenty-ninth, has already set up his headquarters on the site from which Gen. Robert E. Lee directed his legions in 1862.

An advance guard has already laid out the camp site, but on arrival the men will have to pitch tents, set up cots and make the rolling fields as homelike as possible for the annual field service. During the first week, the division will remain at camp, conducting battalion, regimental, brigade and divisional exercises.

The second week, however, the Twenty-ninth will join the Twenty-eighth Division from Pennsylvania to fight a "streamlined" division of Regular Army troops. Part of the Pennsylvania guardsmen will be in the convoys coming through the city today, while the remainder will roll into Manassas aboard 13 special trains during the day.

Maj. Gen. James K. ("Kelly") Parsons, commander of the Third Corps Area, will be in charge of the maneuvers, and will head the two Guard divisions in defending Washington against the invading "Blacks" during the four-day "war," August 14-17. His headquarters are at Manassas, with the Twenty-eighth Division nearby.

The "Blacks"—as distinguished from the defending "Blues"—will concentrate at Fort George G. Meade, Md., and Fort Belvoir, Va., Monday and Tuesday. They march against the Blue force next week-end. Brig. Gen. Maxwell Murray, commander of the Washington brigade, heads the "enemy," which comprises practically all Regular Army troops in the Third Corps Area—about 6,000 in all.

Nineteen convoys of Pennsylvania troops will move through Washington between 10:15 a. m. and 4:30 p. m. today. They will come into the city via U. S. highway No. 1, passing through Bladensburg to New York avenue, thence via New Jersey avenue, Second street northwest and Constitution avenue to the Fourteenth street bridge. From there they will go to the maneuver area on U. S. No. 211.

District and Maryland troops will cross the Key Bridge, reaching it by way of Wisconsin avenue, Thirty-fourth street and M street. They will travel to Gainesville over U. S. 29 and U. S. 211. Two more convoys will take this route Sunday morning.

Tomorrow will be a day of rest at the camps. Lieut. Col. Churchill Gibson, chaplain of the Twenty-ninth Division staff, announces that a field mass for Catholic soldiers will be celebrated at 9:15 a. m. at Linton Hall Academy, Bristow, 4 miles from Gainesville, and that Protestant services will be held by each organization at times and places to be fixed by the various unit chaplains.

Troops streaming through Washington all day long today on their way to the old Bull Run Battlefield will be sped from border to border by more than 40 motorcycle patrolmen.

After a conference with precinct captains, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, of Metropolitan Police, announced last night 30 motorcycle men from the traffic squad and 12 to 20 from the precincts would go on duty at 5 a. m. Stationed at the District line, these men will meet convoys, lead them across Washington on arterial highways and turn them over to Virginia State troopers at the Key and Fourteenth street bridges.

Baby Restored to Mother's Arms

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thorne had their 4-month-old baby Barbara Alicia back with them today after her absence since May, a bitter court custody fight, and many tears. Barbara was brought back yesterday from Connecticut, where she had been sent to a wealthy couple by a Washington child adoption agent

Mrs. Thorne's Baby Returned

baby in court in obedience to a habeas corpus order.

McCormick announced yesterday that the baby would arrive on a train at 5:30 p. m. yesterday, would be taken to Mrs. Grover's home, 3813 Jocelyn street northwest, and there turned over to the parents.

May Sue for Damages

Mr. Thorne's lawyer, Culver B. Chamberlain, objected to a proposal that, when the baby was given them, his clients sign a release which would prevent the Thornes bringing a damage suit against Mrs. Grover.

Goldsborough ordered that the baby be given the Thornes as soon as she got to Union Station and sent United States Deputy Marshal Joseph Cappola to meet the train and see that she was returned.

With Coppola went Chamberlain and Attorneys Harry Covington and Samuel Spencer, who were retained by the Tilts to protect their interests. Spencer said his clients had no idea the Thornes wanted the child and were not willing to keep her now that they did know.

The welcoming committee stopped two women with babies, but each time conferred and decided the babies were older than Barbara Alicia's established four months of maturity.

"Have you the Thorne baby there," Cappola asked a third woman carrying an infant. She did not answer, but increased her pace. Others crowded about asking similar questions. Still no reply.

"Let me alone, what is this?" the woman finally cried. "Let me get to the information desk."

Baby Unperturbed

Cappola showed his court order.

"I don't care, I'm not going to answer any questions."

By now dozens of spectators were following the nurse.

The nurse got to the information desk and rested the baby on the counter. The little girl wore a simple white dress with pink trimmings. She appeared in perfect health but unperturbed by the excitement.

To Coppola's warning that if she persisted in her defiance he would have to detain her for possible contempt of court, the nurse replied only by shaking her head.

After a few minutes the nurse picked up the baby and started back to the platform, followed by the same entourage. She rushed into the station master's office. Covington managed to convince her he was the lawyer she was supposed to meet. But to suggestions that she give up the baby the nurse was deaf. She was, she said, going straight to Mrs. Grover's.

Thornes Weep

She continued to refuse after the Thornes arrived and were admitted, both crying, into the station master's office. They had not seen the bay since May, when they claim they accepted Mrs. Grover's offer of temporary care for their daughter because they were destitute and Mrs. Thorne was ill. Mrs. Grover claims they signed a consent to the baby's adoption, by authority of which she gave the child to the Tilts four days after she got it. The Thornes say they did not understand what they were signing.

The nurse became hysterical as the argument went on and cried freely, but she hung on to the baby. Finally she handed the child to Mrs. Thorne, upon a promise that they all would go to Mrs. Grover's home.

"I'm so happy, so happy," Mrs. Thorne sobbed.

Deputy Marshal Cappola said Mrs. Thorne and the nurse chatted amiably on the way to Mrs. Grover's. He explained that the court's order was complied with at the station when the baby was handed to Mrs. Thorne, but that he felt it more humane to make the trip to Mrs. Grover's to placate the semi-hysterical nurse. Cappola said that at no time in the car, or in the Grover home, did the nurse say who she was. She left and was believed planning to return at once to New York.

Baby in Fine Condition

Two physicians examined Barbara Alicia at the Grover home and pronounced her in fine condition. After about 25 minutes there the Thornes emerged, proudly holding the child and drove off in their own car.

Barbara Alicia is scheduled to make her next public appearance on Tuesday, when the habeas corpus hearing is scheduled to be concluded before Justice Goldsborough.

Md. Police Check Driving Permits at Jimmy's Place

Prince Georges County police added a new wrinkle to their "harassment" campaign of "Jimmy" LaFontaine's place yesterday when they began halting automobiles entering and leaving and demanding the operators' permits of the drivers. The names and addresses were carefully noted.

Taxi drivers also were required to show their insurance papers.

The new move followed a statement by State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., that taxicab drivers "are going to be pretty much surprised when they find there is a law against soliciting patrons for gambling establishments."

Business at Jimmy's place had dropped off about two-thirds, the "license-taking" county police discovered yesterday. The total of approximately 120 cars an hour that were recorded Wednesday had shrunk to about 40 cars an hour yesterday.

All cars entering and leaving were not halted. The policemen selected their prey. Many of them carried the low numbers supposed to be the prerogative of prominent citizens in Washington. The car halting was handled by Corporal John F. Dent, State's attorney's special investigator, and Sergt. Elon Turner, who was transferred from Upper Marlboro to the Hyattsville sub-station to aid in the "campaign of harassment." Policeman Charles N. Thomsen sat in a parked car and noted each number entering and leaving. Beside each halted car's number he marked "stopped."

State's Attorney Wheatley declared yesterday that despite threats from "thugs and gangsters" that they would oppose him in the next election, "I am just bull headed enough to go ahead with this campaign and leave the election to the people of this county."

Law Against Solicitation

"This is no sporadic raid. This is the beginning of an organized campaign to rid Prince Georges County of gambling and racketers. Jimmy's place is the most important such establishment in the county and we decided that success of the campaign requires that we concentrate on closing it first. The others will follow.

"We are awaiting a report on the names and addresses of the owners of more than 200 cars which we have requested. Until we get them we will continue the campaign of harassment.

"Chief of Police Hepburn has assigned Corporal Dent and Officer Thonsen to this campaign. Both are honest and not afraid. We have another courageous man in Sergt. Elon Turner at Hyattsville. When we give him the word he will obey orders—and he won't be afraid of any Biltimore or Philadelphia gangsters. I have the greatest confidence in these men.

"Dent went through the F. B. I. school and received intensive training in preparation of just such cases. He has learned the uses of studying land records and income tax records and the working up of evidence from other records. We know much more than they suspect.

"Some of these bank tellers in Washington are going to be much surprised when we serve summons on them at their banks. There are a lot of Government employes in the same boat.

"These taxi drivers who think they have put something over on us when they drop their passengers outside or up the street are going to be much surprised when they find that there is a law against solicitation.

"We have asked the District of Columbia police to post 'No Parking' signs on Eastern avenue where a number of patrons have been parking their cars. They said they had to give ten days notice, but when we want to stop parking we put up an 'emergency' sign, and I think they can do the same."

The signs had not been posted last night.

There are some of my friends included in the list of those who visited Jimmy's," Wheatley said. 'If they lose their jobs, I will feel sorry, but I knew what I was doing when I stood up before the judge and took my oath of office. I did not have to take that oath, but since I have, I am going to live up to it.

"There has been some criticism of the campaign, but you will find it is coming from proprietors of beer joints and slot-machine operators."

"They had the audacity to notify me that they were going to throw their money and influence into the next election against me. I believe, though, that the real Prince Georgians are behind me. These men who come into the county to operate gambling joints and slot machines are not county men. They are from Washington and Baltimore and Philadelphia. I am going to do my best to send them back where they belong—or to jail.

"I am a Prince Georgian, born and raised here. I feel that the welfare of the county requires cleaning up this situation. A clean county will attract the kind of people we want in this county and I can't believe that the people of this county are going to support gamblers and racketeers. They might get me out, but there will be another courageous man in Sergt. Elon Turner at Hyattsville. When another Prince Georgian to take my place."

U. S. Presses Racket Probe Amid Secrecy

Witnesses Questioned In N. Y. Preparatory To National Drive

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 4.—In guarded Federal building hideaways here Government agents continued today their examination of frightened witnesses in preparation for the opening Monday of a nationally co-ordinated campaign against crime.

On that day, an extraordinary Federal grand jury will be convened to serve as a clearing house of crime data, particularly of information by which the authorities hope to smoke out such fugitive desperadoes as Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, the missing New York boss racketeer.

Elaborate Precautions Taken

Elaborate precautions for secrecy and for protection of those prepared to give information were taken by the Government. The agents brought in their witnesses by a garage driveway to the courthouse basement.

The anonymity of every person thus far questioned, save one, has been preserved. That one was J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, former "mouthpiece" for the old Dutch Schultz policy racket, whose testimony helped convict Tammany District Leader James J. Hines of affording political protection.

Davis was accompanied to the courthouse by four special agents of the Department of Justice and one city detective.

Dewey Pursues Drive

Meanwhile, Thomas E. Dewey, New York County district attorney, pursued his campaign against Lepke, whom he has described as the country's "most dangerous industrial racketeer."

Dewey, who says Lepke is conducting a "war of extermination" against his former associates, has assigned detectives to every person considered to be in that category. The prosecutor was reported to have put guards about even the wife and daughter of Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro, Lepke's erstwhile chief partner.

Gurrah himself is in prison and Dewey has said that if he would "talk" he would "blow the lid" off the underworld.

Favorite-Son Boom For Tydings Gains

dent boom is a reflection of the added prestige that President Roosevelt unwittingly gave the Maryland Senator in the 1938 primary. In a White House press conference, the President called Tydings a "betrayer" of the New Deal.

Ten days before the primary, President Roosevelt went into Maryland in an ambitious effort to elect Tydings' New Deal opponent, former Representative David J. Lewis. First he stopped at Morgantown and promised a 2-mile bridge across the Potomac—a structure that now is 15 per cent completed—and then he went down to the Eastern Shore and, at Denton, praised Lewis as the "Good Samaritan" of politics, denounced Tydings by inference as a "reactionary," and justified his right to go into any State to keep the Democratic Party liberal.

Tydings defeated Lewis in resounding fashion, and then in the November election won a third term in the Senate by a record-breaking majority. Talk of a Tydings-for-President boom began then. In the interval, Tydings has received hundreds of letters from all parts of the country, congratulating him on his victory and promising support if he should be a Presidential candidate.

Maryland's course of action at the 1940 convention will be decided at the State Democratic convention next May. This convention will select delegates to the national convention and determine whether they are to go pledged to Tydings or unpledged. Gov. O'Conor undoubtedly will have much to say about this.

The Calvert Club, in indorsing Tydings yesterday for the Presidential nomination, said its action had Tydings' "full approval." Here in Washington the Senator modified this somewhat by saying that he had no objection.

"I didn't know anything about it," he said, "until they came to me and asked me if I had any objection to their giving it to the press. I said I had none and thanked them for their kind indorsement and encouragement."

Others who are being talked of as favorite-son candidates are Senator Wheeler, of Montana; Senator Barkley, of Kentucky; Speaker Bankhead, of Alabama; Gov. Moore of New Jersey; Gov. Hooey of North Carolina; Senator Donahey of Ohio; Vice President Garner and Federal Security Administrator McNutt.

7 Police Privates Named Precinct Detectives

The Commissioners yesterday promoted seven police privates to the rank of precinct detectives.

With the exception of one, the new detectives will remain at their regular precincts. John R. Luskey, of the hack inspector's office, will be transferred to the Sixth Precinct.

The other appointees and their precincts follow: George M. Wilson, Fourth; James T. Nash, Seventh; William R. Greenfield, Eleventh; David A. Higgins, Ninth; Elwood S. Groves, First, and Harold H. Hodge, Second.

Farley, in Germany, Dodges Query on Taft

Berlin, Aug. 4 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley arrived here today and in his first meeting with Berlin correspondents was told that Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, had announced his willingness to run for the Presidency. He replied: "My only comment is that whoever is nominated by the Democratic Party will be the successful candidate."

He sidestepped questions as to what he thought of Germany, insisting that he was on a holiday and that official Germany had accepted him as merely a vacation visitor. He expected to leave Sunday for Warsaw to visit United States Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel, jr.

Lack of Funds Stalls Federal Reorganization

Personnel Heads Stymied by House Slash of $600,000

Federal personnel officers, left by an economy-minded House without funds to carry out a large-scale revamping of Governmental employe procedure outlined by executive orders a year ago, met yesterday with William H. McReynolds, Presidential adviser on Administration, in a desperate attempt to salvage the wreckage.

Results of the conference, which was to formulate recommendations to the President, were largely negative, it was learned. The personnel officers, who also were accompanied by departmental fiscal and Administrative officials, agreed they could not risk creation of deficiencies to forward the new employe program in the face of the House's action Wednesday in slashing almost $600,000 for that purpose from the third deficiency bill.

Flemming Not "Discouraged"

Last night, however, Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming assured an employe group that the commission was "not discouraged" at the curtailment and expected progress in the next twelve months on the new personnel system. Other officials said that those agencies and departments whose personnel offices were already well established could continue plans for reclassification, in-service training, appeals procedure and competitive promotions—the keystones of the general program.

Proceedings of the conference with the Presidential adviser were closely guarded and it was not known what recommendations McReynolds made to the President. It was said, however, that the personnel officers agreed "to do the best we can" without additional funds, to advance the aims of the June, 1938, executive order. This recommended the creation of modern personnel offices in each department and important independent agency, establishment of training programs, inter-Government and intra-agency competitive promotion examinations, and new recruiting procedures.

The personnel officers also agreed to resubmit the necessary appropriation requests in the 1941 budgets. There was mention of the possibility that some of the funds might then be voted for immediate use, before the next fiscal year.

Try to Maintain Morale

Concensus was the individual personnel officers would seek meantime to "scrape up" any funds possible to employ an additional clerk or two. It was reported, however, that very few of the establishments indicated they had even a small amount of money which could be used for that purpose.

A major purpose of the conference, it was reported, was to "maintain morale" among personnel officers and lay plans so the Government could "swing into a program" when funds finally were made available.

Commission sources said there was small possibility of holding the Government-wide promotion examinations, to have been conducted by the commission for jobs common to several agencies. There would be some progress made, however, it was indicated, in carrying out competitive promotions within individual agencies.

Flemming, speaking before the District Council, United Federal Workers, told the union it was "unfortunate" that the requests for funds had been submitted all at once in the deficiency bill. The curtailment, which even a more liberal Senate failed to restore last night, will not mean "no progress," he said. Each department and agency, he believed, would carry out the program as best it could and might even make notable developments.

Defense Assails Slaying Confession

Benton, Ill., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—Defense counsel for George W. Gore, jr., son of a wealthy surgeon, charged today his client had been "beaten to a pulp" by officers who forced him to confess that he killed his stepmother.

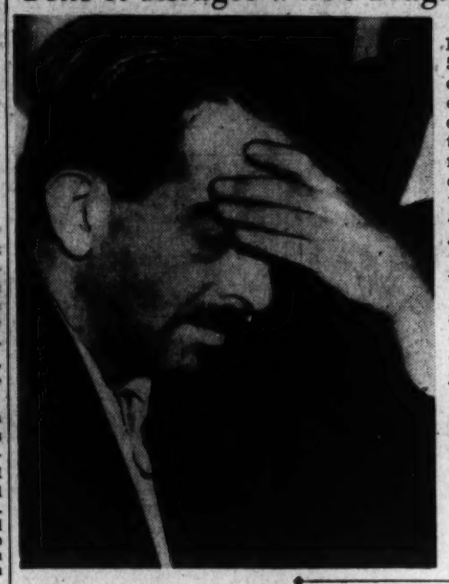
Attorney Carl Choisser made the charge in filing a second petition for a writ of habeas corpus seeking his client's return here by 9 a. m. tomorrow. The petition contended Gore needed medical attention.

Gore was reported to have confessed he killed Mrs. Nancy Gore, because he resented her having taken the place of his own mother.

Boy, 2, Missing 34 Hours Found

Livingstonville, N. Y., Aug. 4 (U.P.).—A 2-year-old boy who strayed from his farm home and wandered for 34 hours in torrential rains through the Catskill Mountain wildnerness, was found naked and scratched but smiling late today. David Ellett was discovered by Civilian Conservation Corps workers sitting at the bottom of a ravine.

Tells of Refugee Wife's Tragic Death



Karl Langer, 50, at an inquest yesterday in Chicago, gave tragic testimony of the deaths of his wife, Adele, 46; his sons, Jan, 4, and Tommy, 6, who plunged 13 floors from a hotel window. The coroner's jury blamed "persecution" by new German government of Czecho-Slovakia for the fatal leap termed a "suicide colony," according to the Associated Press.

[They called themselves "anschluss victims," it added, and expressed the belief self-destruction was preferable to return to their home lands.—Editor's note.]

"Due to Persecution"

A coroner's jury heard the story of Mrs. Langer's leap from the hotel window. A taxicab driver told of sitting in his cab and of seeing three bodies hurtling toward him to the street. Refugee friends of the Langers told of Mrs. Langer's constant fear that she and her family would have to return to Prague, where a few months ago they owned a $1,500,000 textile firm.

The jury's verdict was:

"Temporary insanity due to persecution."

The Langers and their sons, Thomas, 6, and Mischa, 4, arrived in Chicago a few days ago with $7,000. They had fled from Prague last month and entered the United States on a six-months visitors' visa. Mrs. Langer feared that when the visa expired, they would be forced to return to Prague.

Yesterday at the small hotel in which they and other refugees had taken shelter, Mrs. Langer dressed her sons in sun suits and told Langer they were going to the zoo.

"They Should Be Happy"

Three hours later she registered at the Congress Hotel. Her only luggage was a small handbag. She and the children went immediately to their room, leaving again at 7 p. m. and returning at 10 p. m. Donald Franklin, elevator operator, remarked that the children looked happy.

"They should be happy," Mrs. Langer replied in broken English. "They're going to see their Daddy tomorrow."

She added that they were tired and that she was going to put them to bed.

An hour later all three were hurtling to the sidewalk.

Meanwhile news had come to Langer for which they all had been waiting. He had been attempting to go to Canada or Bolivia and yesterday he learned that steps had been taken to assure them at least a year's residenc in Bolivia. The news was the answer to Mrs. Langer's most fervent prayers and anxiously he awaited her to break the tidings.

But Langer had forgotten his first elation when police came to him early today. He was pacing the sidewalk. Police, warned that he suffered from a heart ailment, told him there had been an accident. They took him to police headquarters to break the news.

Constantly Talked of Suicide

Langer's first outburst led to fears that he might have a heart attack. Later he regained a measure of composure and gave the officers a sketchy history, including the fact that he had owned the Hynek Marpoles Textile Co. in Prague. He said that since arriving in America his wife had been despondent and constantly talked of suicide.

Detectives who examined the hotel room found that Mrs. Langer apparently had slashed her wrists deeply before taking the plunge with the children in her arms. The bed was mussed as if the children had been sleeping, and perhaps they still were groggy with sleep when their mother lifted them over the window ledge.

In the small suitcase which Mrs. Langer had carried police found three pictures. Two were of the children and the third of her husband.

Tonight the Czecho-Slovak National Council said Mrs. Langer "did not die in vain."

"By her death she rendered a service to the world," Joseph Martinek, council secretary, said. "In bringing to the attention of the people of the United States the horror which Czecho-Slovakian people are suffering here and abroad because of fear of the Nazis."

Martinek said Mrs. Langer's suicide leap was "the act of a martyr."

Interest Rate Cut For Home Owners

said the HOLC reduction would save borrowers an estimated total of from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000 a year. HOLC officials said the cut would apply to more than 800,000 borrowers.

In whittling down the rate, the corporation passed on to home owners interest savings made as the result of the corporation's recent $900,000,000 refunding operation.

Fahey's announcement said "the reduction, which will apply to all borrowers who meet their obligation in accordance with their contracts, will be put in effect as soon as the many necessary detailed arrangements can be completed throughout the country.

"Since the corporation made no charges in connection with the granting of original loans, or any subsequent adjustments, the new rate will figure 4½ per cent net to borrowers on their declining loan balances."

The reduction will not be retroactive, it was stated.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation, which started operations in June, 1933, made more than 1,000,000 loans to distressed home owners in cities, towns and villages. No loans were authorized on farm homes.

The beginning of operations, the loan total reached somewhat more than $3,000,000,000, of which about $600,000,000 has been repaid.

President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that the House vote killing his proposed $800,000,000 expansion of the Government's low-cost housing program spoke for itself.

When asked to discuss the action, the President resorted to a Latin phrase—res ipse loquitur—and said that included the roll call vote.

Last Tuesday, after the House had defeated his main lending bill, Mr. Roosevelt said the action would have an adverse effect on industry, the taxpayers and relief rolls, and added this would be the same effect should the housing measure go the same way.

Troops Patrol Dam As Work Resumes

Green Mountain Dam, Colo., Aug. 4 (AP).—Grim and still apprehensive, men went back to work today on the Green Mountain Dam, scene of a 48-hour labor disturbance marked by rifle fire and physical combat that brought injury to seven persons.

Only weapons in evidence were those of National Guardsmen. But stacked in the camp were 300 assorted guns, taken from workmen and residents.

"Strikers and non-strikers are working side by side," reported A. K. Anderson, superintendent. He said strikers were being rehired "without discrimination."

Rare Tumor Kills 2-Year-Old Boy

New Rochelle, N. Y., Aug. 4 (INS).—Harold Holt, jr., of Monongahela, Pa., died at New Rochelle Hospital tonight, victim of a rare malady. The child was taken to the hospital last March to undergo treatment for a rare Wilm's tumor.

Hospital officials quoted the attending physician as saying that the boy's death was due to an intestinal obstruction.

Labor Board Puts Steel Case Up to Court

Urges Order to Firm To Rehire 5,000, Pay Back Wages, Be Upheld

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—The National Labor Relations Board today asked the Circuit Court of Appeals to uphold a board order issued last October 18, requiring the Republic Steel Corporation to reinstate 5,000 employes with back pay running into millions of dollars.

Republic filed exceptions to the original board complaint on August 5, 1937. It denied allegations of unfair labor practices and charged that strikes in May, 1937, were "called by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, a C. I. O. affiliate, without justification" in the absence of genuine differences between the corporation and its employes.

Four Questions Before Court

The corporation has not as yet filed its brief before the Federal court.

In its brief today the board stated that there are four questions for the court to decide:

Whether the board afforded petitioner (Republic Steel) a hearing as required by due process of law.

Whether the board's findings that petitioner had engaged in unfair labor practices are supported by the evidence.

Whether the board's findings that petitioner's employes went on strike because of petitioner's unfair labor practices are supported by evidence.

Whether the board's order is valid and proper under the act.

Organizers Held Attacked

Answering Republic's charge that the board had not afforded ample hearings as required by law, the brief said "petitioner, through the charges, complaint, and introduction of evidence, had been afforded full notice of the issues presented by the case and to be decided by the board," and was permitted to introduce evidence, cross-examine witnesses, argue motions and file objections.

The brief charged that evidence had been adduced to show that Republic had fostered a company-dominated union, discouraged membership in the SWOC and hired private police who "brutally attacked and beat" union organizers.

Michigan Official Shuns N. Y. Liquor

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—Harry F. Kelly, Michigan's secretary of state, celebrated Michigan Day at the World's Fair today, but managed to skirt that "hellish brink" of which 80-year-old Gov. Dickinson warned the Nation a fortnight ago. There were chances aplenty to toss off a tall cold one, but Kelly declined, indicating he objected not to drinking—at the proper time—or to others doing so.

Heywood Broun Heads Newspaper Guild Again

San Francisco, Aug. 4 (AP).—Heywood Broun, New York columnist, was re-elected today as president of the American Newspaper Guild. Milton Kaufman, of New York, was elected executive vice president, succeeding Jonathan Eddy.

Caverly, Loeb-Leopold Trial Judge, Dies

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Judge John R. Caverly, 78, Cook County jurist who presided at the Loeb-Leopold murder trial in 1924, died today in Bermuda.

Richard Loeb and Nathan F. Leopold, jr., scions of millionaire families, were charged with the thrill-slaying of Bobby Franks.

Film Play of Australia Is At the Capitol

"Captain Fury" Stars Aherne and McLaglen; Varied Stage Bill

"CAPTAIN FURY." United Artists picturization of a screen play by Grover Jones, Jack Jevne and William De Mille, costarring Brian Aherne and Victor McLaglen, with Paul Lukas, June Lang, John Carradine, George Zucco, Douglas Dumbrille, Virginia Field, Charles Middleton, Lawrence Grossmith, Lumsden Hare, Mary Gordon, John Warburton, Claud Allister, Will Stanton, Edgar Norton, Margaret Roach, Billy Bevan and Edwin Brian. Directed by Hal Roach. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Our woolly friends, the sheep, exert a slightly torpescent influence on "Captain Fury," the Capitol's new film, a tale of Australian frontier life which never seems quite so exciting as it should be.

For this sheep country of Down Under is all but untilled cinema land and the Robin Hoodish character who is its hero is one of those bold, stout fellows whose only care is the rights of his fellow men. Brian Aherne plays Capt. Michael Fury in a rather disinterested manner, stalking about bravely, but his heart doesn't seem to be in it. Victor McLaglen is expertly rough and likeable and, as in "We're Going to Be Rich," which also had some scenes of early Australia, he is again called "Blackie."

As is the case the world over, we find that in Australia, too, the few have been lording it over the many. Our particular hate is one Arnold Trist, who not only maltreats the prisoners who have been exported from Great Britain to labor in the new colony, but also is forcing from their small farms the poorer farmers whose lands he desires. Spoilation and fire are his weapons, until from his own workhouses escapes an Irishman exile whose crime at home was his interest in the enslaved masses.

Fury Goes Into Action

Capt. Fury whips the valley folk into action and manages to bring about the escape of some of his friends in the workhouse. Among them is Blackie, a tough mug, but a funny one, and faithful to the fellow who had once dared to fight him. Naturally, there is romance in all this, but there is much clumping about on horses that eventually puts Mr. Trist where he never will be missed.

Director Hal Roach, who is much more at home in the genre of "Topper" and the like, has flipped in some sly humorous touches which aid the piece a great deal. Well-dunking and head-conking are some of his reliable and cheering effects, but for so potentially explosive a script, the outcome is strangely indifferent.

John Carradine, Paul Lukas and Douglas Dumbrille are competent in their important supporting roles, but June Lang completely succumbed to the aforementioned sheep and sleepwalks through her heroine's part.

A Variegated Stage Bill

There are several fine acts on the Capitol stage, not the least of which is the appearance of Yasha Bunchuk, who conducts the Capitol's orchestra in a potpourri, ranging from an overambitious "Tannhauser" overture to the melodic "Faust" trio, which employs a full organ that is good to hear. He also leads a nicely orchestrated "I Got Rhythm."

Then there is Jack Cole and his East Indian dancers, whose routine is strikingly modern and imaginative. They offer two routines, one with a Southern background that was particularly effective. Marty May is the amiable, story-telling master of ceremonies, whose work is familiar, but funny.

The biggest hand at yesterday's first house, however, went to the Great Yacopis, eight tumblers who, to coin a phrase, do the impossible. They are breath-takingly good at their game.

Mildred Fenton, who replaces Mary Martin in "I'd Rather Be Right," sings and the Rockets are a colorful background for Mr. Cole and his two attractively costumed dancers. RICHARD L. COE.

RKO-Keith's

It was more or less of a foregone conclusion that so deftly written, ably directed and perfectly acted a screen comedy as "Bachelor Mother" would enjoy more than a single week of popularity in Washington, and that is the way it has eventuated at RKO-Keith's. The second week of the engagement is now under way with no diminution of public interest in the dilemma of the shop girl who was hoist by her own petard when she attempted to do a kindly deed.

If Ginger Rogers had not picked that foundling up off the steps of the orphanage, she would have had less trouble and the theatergoing public would have had infinitely less fun. That baby placed Miss Rogers in the anomalous position of being the mother of a youngster she had never seen before. The aged and crotchety proprietor of the department store, where the unwitting "mother" was employed, and his slightly more susceptible son eventually become involved in the case, not to mention Ginger's boy friend and practically everybody else in the establishment.

Miss Rogers long since has been recognized as a comedienne of more than ordinary capability. David Niven, cast as the younger of the business tycoons, only now is emerging as a comedian. His work is tremendously effective. Charles Coburn, Frank Albertson and Ernest Truex are among the numerous others who help to make "Bachelor Mother" the delightful bit of humorous froth it is.

Columbia

What has not been written or said about "Goodbye Mr. Chips" could be printed on the sharp edge of a knife. What is more, all that has been said or written has been laudatory and that accounts for the film's opening at the Columbia yesterday for a fourth week on F street.

The picturized James Hilton novel, which concerned the life of an English schoolmaster, boasts a portrayal by Robert Donat, in the title role, which could scarcely be improved. From youth to old age, Mr. Donat's Chips is unerringly right. The setting of an ivy-banked public school is brought to life by hundreds of typical young boys and an English actress, Greer Garson, makes a promising bow on the American screen as Chips' lovely young wife. Surely this picture will stand well up in the first ten when the year's favorite films are discussed.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Sandy, Betty Grable and 'Rochester' Score a Smash Hit at the Earle

'Unexpected Father' Boasts Able Cast; Stars, in Person, Achieve Triumphs

"UNEXPECTED FATHER." Universal picturization of a story by Leonard Spigelgass, adapted to the screen by the author and Charles Grayson, starring Baby Sandy, with Mischa Auer, Shirley Ross, Dennis O'Keefe, Joy Hodges, Donald Briggs, Mayo Methot, Anne Nagel, Dorothy Arnold, Anne Gwynne, Richard Lane, Paul Guilfoyle, Jane Darwell and Spencer Charters. Directed by Charles Lamont. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

The new bill at the Earle Theater this week quite justifies the milling crowds that stormed the Thirteenth street house yesterday to gain admittance. With Frankie Masters' Orchestra, on the stage to tootle its tunes; two popular stars of stage, screen and radio, headlining the vaudeville bill in person, and, in "Unexpected Father," a picture that affords hilarity commensurate with the high-power quality of the stage show, the current program assays at just about a 100 per cent summer entertainment value.

BELL

"Unexpected Father" betrays few signs of the great haste with which its was prepared for the screen to take advantage of the baby personality of Sandy before it might be too late. Sandy, who actually is Baby Sandra Henville — although programmed as Sandy Lee—is that amazing youngster from Bing Crosby's "East Side of Heaven," born on the distaff side but apparently destined always to be cast as a boy. It is a fast-moving and amusing film fable that has been woven about the unabashed and gurgling tot this time—something to do with backstage life and the efforts of a group of virtually destitute actors and chorines to care for an orphaned baby whose uncle and aunt aren't fit to rear him.

Sandy's Found His Feet

Sandy isn't quite so infantile now as he was in his first picture—with constant apologies, Miss Henville, for the recurrent male pronouns—but still is wholly capable of sweeping an audience right out of its chairs. He toddles about a bit on his own two feet, "answers back" at most unexpected times in a totally incomprehensible baby prattle and, thanks to a profusion of close-ups along with the long-shots, "steals" this picture as effectually as he did Mr. Crosby's. The baby's most stirring scenes are those in which he crawls out on the stage in the midst of an elaborate production number, chases a toy balloon out onto the window ledge of a twelfth story room, and makes it clear to the legal gentlemen which guardians he prefers. They are the show folks, of course.

But "Unexpected Father" is not completely bound up in the appearances of Sandy. His supporting cast comes in for a full share of praise, too. Their efforts without the baby in the cast would be pointless, but Mischa Auer, as a doorman with the soul of an artist; Shirley Ross and Dennis O'Keefe, as two warring troupers deeply in love, and Mayo Methot and Paul Guilfoyle, as the unworthy foster parents, have their moments and make the utmost of them. First comic honors, as usual, go to Mr. Auer, whose antics are less strained than they sometimes are and whose burlesque exaggerations are thoroughly in the spirit of a charade that is neither big nor important beyond the typhoons of laughter it is able to generate.

Subordinate roles are played effectively by Joy Hodges, Donald Briggs, the "heavy" in the case; Anne Nagel, Dorothy Arnold, Anne Gwynne, Jane Darwell, Frank Reicher and Spencer Charters.

Headliners Score Triumphs

In point of playing time, the stage bill is efficiently dominated by Frankie Masters and his exceedingly excellent orchestra. In cyclonic volume of applause, it is ruled by Betty Grable and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, both appearing in person, fresh from Jack Benny's picture, "Man About Town." Appearing on widely separated parts of the bill, these two ran a dead heat in audience favor yesterday afternoon.

Miss Grable—even more attractive in person than her screen images—is a songstress with a real style, fine presence and complete asurance. Her numbers were greeted with a friendly enthusiasm that must have assured her that her first day on the boards for almost three years was an overwhelming success—just as she said in a graceful curtain speech when the audience wouldn't take "no" for an answer.

Eddie Anderson, a little later, duplicated Miss Grable's personal triumph in two of his dances from "Man About Town," an imaginary telephone conversation with an offstage voice that was a splendid imitation of Jack Benny's and some characteristic by-play that proved him as capable a comedian as all of his radio listeners have suspected right along.

Masters Is Versatile

Others who scored on this ne plus ultra bill were Lane and Ward, acrobatic jitterbugs; the Trado Brothers, with their two-story man "bit," and Marion Francis, songstress with the orchestra. Incidentally, Frankie Masters is a barytone of no mean proportions himself, as well as a bit of a comedian.

A Grantland Rice "Sportlight," titled "Watch Your Step," with Ted Husing doing the commentating upon the manner in which various humans, beasts and fowl walk, and the Paramount News complete the bill that attracted long waiting lines all day yesterday and probably will continue to do so throughout the week.

The problem is not whether or not to go, but how to get in!

Canine Star

Ace, new canine screen star recently featured in "Almost a Gentleman" and "Blind Alibi," shares acting honors with Tim Holt, Virginia Weidler and Janet Shaw in "The Rookie Cop."

Opens Stage Tour at the Earle

BETTY GRABLE,

talented young star of stage, screen and radio, who yesterday "stopped the show" as coheadliner of the new stage bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, where she shares honors with Eddie Anderson, "Rochester," also appearing in person. Both were last seen locally in support of Jack Benny on the screen in "Man About Town." Overflow audiences greeted them yesterday

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Aug. 4.

Butch Towers, the Broadway gambler who is one of the characters Damon Runyon uses in his fiction pieces, went to the Polo Grounds to root for the Giants . . . He and his cronies sat in the upper stands, and were disheartened when the Giants seemed to be licked, because of infield errors . . . "Why don't you start praying?" someone suggested . . . "Nah, what good would that do?" Butch answered. "Them infielders wouldn't hear us 'way out there."

The constant clicking sound heard in the reading room of the Forty-third street library emanates from a 5-cent clicker in the hands of Doc Rockwell, the vaudevillian, who can't stand the quiet . . . At the famed Ziegfeld Roof years ago, when Charles Chaplin was the guest of honor, Joe Frisco did a special performance for him. Frisco, who has had only a few weeks work in the last five years, now is in Hollywood, where Douglas Fairbanks told him: "Chaplin does one swell thing, at private parties. He does a great imitation—of you."

Cecil B. de Mille is sponsoring a new veterans organization—the Veterans of de Mille's Wars. Anybody who acted as a soldier in de Mille's war pictures is eligible for membership.

A Stork Club rhumba orchestra was fired after a two months' engagement. Its leader was noted for his ability to sing love-tunes in four languages . . . On the last night of his engagement, the band leader's solo consisted of a tender rendition of a Castilian lullaby . . .Unknown to him, a member of the Chilean Consul's office was present—and interpreted the lyrics for Sherman Billingsley, owner of the Stork . . . The lyric was an improvised one—cursing, in Spanish, Mr. Billingsley, his heirs and descendants forever.

Jimmy Savo, whom Chaplin has termed the world's greatest pantomimist, has had the most frustrated career on Broadway . . . At 14 Savo was the best boy-juggler in the world. Then he devised one trick, considered the most difficult juggling trick known—to balance a billiard ball atop a cue on his forehead, another billiard ball atop a cue in his left hand, and to juggle three balls with his right hand at the same time. For two years Savo rehearsed this stunt until he mastered it. He exhibited it for one week, and then dropped it from his routine—because it looked so easy that it got no applause.

Savo then aspired to make $200 a week. In 1917 his opportunity came—in "Listen, Lester," which was to star Clifton Webb and Gertrude Vanderbilt. But after two weeks' rehearsal, the show was called off—because Savo was drafted into the Army . . . After 20 years of pantomime, Savo then aspired to have a speaking part in some show. That ambition was realized, when he was hired to appear in Earl Carrol's "Vanities" . . . And when Savo spoke his first lines—in one of the show's opening numbers—he was arrested . . . for uttering censorable words.

Al Jolson has a three-way parlay running now. He bet that Roosevelt's neutrality bill would be defeated, that Danzig will remain a Free City during the entire summer—and then bet it all on Henry Armstrong to beat Lew Ambers. Sam Rosoff, the owner of the Hudson River Night Line, sailed up the Hudson with Harry Hershfield, and observed the Normandie anchored at the pier. "Hm," said Rosoff, deignfully, "I see the French got a boat, too" . . . Martin Beck, the producer, is an inveterate bridge player and ocean voyager. Beck insists he'll never travel on the Normandie again. "It's too fast," is his complaint. "It only allows for 18 rubbers of bridge."

Action Sizzles In New Film On Met. Screen

'Hell's Kitchen' Has 'Dead End' Kids in Leading Roles

"HELL'S KITCHEN." Warner Brothers picturization of an original story by Crane Wilbur, adapted to the screen by Mr. Wilbur and Fred Niblo, Jr., with the "Dead End" Kids, Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, Stanley Fields, Frankie Burke, Grant Mitchell, Fred Tozere, Arthur Loft, Vera Lewis, Robert Homans, Charley Foy, Robert Strange, Raymond Bailey, Clem Bevans, George Irving and Ila Rhodes. Directed by Lewis Seiler and E. A. Dupont. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

It's a fine broth they serve up in "Hell's Kitchen," current at the Metropolitan. Into equal parts of brutality and hypocrisy, seasoned with a dash of racketeering, they stir that pack of young hellions, the "Dead End" kids. But the kids refuse to be cooked, come out kicking and on top of the world.

"Hell's Kitchen" does not derive from the similarly named New York section. It is the inmates' undercover name for a shelter for homeless boys. This shelter is "Boys' Town" turned inside out. It is operated by a holier-than-thou old reprobate as a base for contribution soliciting. The boys are underfed, overworked, slapped around and locked in the "cold box" if they get fresh.

All is merry as a funeral march in the shelter until an amiable thug, rejoicing in the name of Buck Caesar, and played by Stanley Fields, gets the notion of making himself look good in the eyes of the law by doing some philanthropic work. He picks on the shelter as the object of his attentions, gets control of it through some of the miraculous hanky-panky so common in the cinema. Buck makes a nice job of rehabilitating the shelter. He gives the boys their own government, eases up conditions generally and provides a new athletic set-up. Naturally, he gets in the hair of the former head of the institution. From here it's just a step to framing him into a misdemeanor that will send him to the penitentiary to serve out a suspended sentence.

Excitement Runs High

Excitement sizzles through the picture. There's a hockey game of the roughest and toughest. Another sequence depicts the shelter superintendent's attempts to shoot a smart little puppy, whose vanishing technic is faster than his adversary's trigger finger. There's a boy frozen to death in the "cold box." There's a first-class riot, culminating in a drumhead trial of the superintendent by the boys, who decide that the proper punishment of the old rogue is to bury him alive. Unfortunately, they are balked in this commendable enterprise.

The "Dead End" kids are again at their best in this rattlety-bang celluloid. Grant Mitchell is splendid as that prize meanie, the superintendent. Stanley Fields plays Buck Caesar zestfully. Ronald Reagan and Margaret Lindsay are responsible for a frail thread of love interest.

Notable Short Reels

A film trip through Colombia, our little-known neighbor to the South, proves to be one of the best travel shorts ever made. It takes you to the stupendous Andean heights, to Bogota, a capital almost inaccessible except by air; to craglike San Felipe fortress, to the snowy blossoms of the coffee country. There are smiling Indian girls in gay blankets, grim Indian bucks, the seething life of the markets and plazas.

The newsreel is a honey this week, both in gayety and variety of shots. There's a grandpa of 86, who's just completed a 1,000-mile bike trip; never learned to bicycle until he was 79. There's an air sequence showing the original Wright plane, the primitive combat planes of the World War and the skyland argosies of today. There's a beauty parade, a midget auto race and, for a climax, that comical young cuss, Bob Hope, speechifies about his trip to Europe.

Porky, Pinky and Petunia go a-picnicking in a satisfying cartoon comedy. Also, there's a Floyd Gibbons adventure, all about an unconscious man in a well with a live fuse attached to a stick of dynamite. His friends had a great time hauling him out. What we couldn't figure out was why someone didn't just toss a bucket of water down on the fuse. MARY HARRIS.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service

Hollywood, Aug. 4.—Hedy Lamarr is still the most glamorous woman on the screen. Just to look at her is a joy, and that's why in "Lady of the Tropics" you pay no attention to the fantastic story and the little improbabilities, for it's Hedy who holds your entire attention. Today it was decided to costar Robert Taylor with her again and to keep this romantic team intact.

LOUELLA PARSONS

So her next picture, even before "The Ziegfeld Girl," is "Guns and Fiddles," a property M-G-M has owned for a long time. Jack Conway, who deserves great credit for handling Hedy so adroitly in "Lady of the Tropics" and for keeping the air of mystery about her, will again direct Hedy and Bob and Miliza Korjus, who draws a featured role.

Probably the most far-fetched rumor in our town is the gossiped rivalry between Shirley Temple and Sybil Jason following "The Little Princess." Mrs. Temple was supposed to have been responsible for keeping the little English girl off the screen. That chit-chat is now put in the discard with the news that Sybil gets the role of the little invalid, Angela, in "The Bluebird," for whom My-tyl (Shirley) goes in quest of the Bluebird to bring her happiness. Spring Byington is Shirley's mother, with Gale Sondergaard as the evil Tyletie, the cat, and you'll see droll Eddie Collins as Tyle, the dog. Gene Markey, home from the hospital, recuperating from a brush with pneumonia, starts production September 5 if Walter Lang, the director, can tear himself away from that new baby.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Carole Lombard reported resting comfortably following an emergency operation; Olivia de Havilland and Pat De Cicco, jitterbugging to Benny Goodman's Orchestra at Victor Hugo's, moving on to a later session at the Troc; Mack Gordon, watching Alice Faye and Tony Martin doing some fast stepping, said Benny Goodman makes jitterbugs of the glitterbugs. Bonita Granville, a vision in white dancing every dance, was the belle of the younger generation. Her beau was rich young "Dodo" Sinclair; Judy Garland, the most energetic of the youngsters, escorted by Barron Polan; Alec Templeton, the blind pianist who came at Goodman's special invitation, had the hectic dancers calling for encores. He was accompanied by his father and mother, whom he tried to induce to jitterbug, but Pa Templeton said his speed was the polka; Eddie Cantor and Jack Benny actually screamed across the table in an effort to hear each other above the din. Even Eddie's daughter, who is married to Jimmy McHugh's son, was there with her young husband. The young McHughs are getting ready to give Eddie the title of grandpa.

Hedy Lamarr had a tremendous ovation when she arrived at the Chinese Theater with Gene Markey, who made his first appearance since his illness; Linda Darnell, T-C-F's glamour prospect, came with Maury Grossman, Metro writer; the Troc very gay following the "Lady of the Tropics" preview; Mrs. Jack Warner, Lili Damita and Dolores del Rio in a party with Bob Ritchie, William Haines, Howard Hughes, Whitney de Rham and others; Bill Haines danced with Corinne Griffith Marshall, who is still soo beautiful, and it was like old times seeing the two stars of silent pictures together. Her house guest, Mrs. Jim Farley, Joseph Schenck and the William Goetzes came on from a dinner honoring Mrs. Farley; Ann Sheridan.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 4.—When Morgan, Schwab or Jules Bache pays $100,000 for a painting, that's news, but when Eddie Robinson, Miriam Hopkins or Charlie Ruggles does it, it's an outrage. The public has formed the habit of scolding members of our industry.

HOPPER

A few weeks ago, Charlie Ruggles paid $2,500 for a painting by Charles Swinnerton. Ruggles got so many letters of criticism for spending money on a painting when there was so much poverty right under his nose (guess painters aren't supposed to live, huh?) and he felt it so keenly that he sold it to Mr. O'Malley, of Santa Barbara, for $3,000, giving the difference to charity. I haven't heard a word directed against Mr. O'Malley, who's delighted with his bargain.

Director Dick Wallace, who's just finished "The Underpup," is shopping for an apartment. His agent suggested a ranch. Says: "We've taken over a parking lot near the Ambassador which could be easily converted into a ranch big enough for cows and chickens. And with such an idea we could probably get 25 cents apiece from rubbernecks."

Can't you hear the moo of misery from the hotel guests? Although we have a turkey farm in the heart of Hollywood, owned by Mrs. Sam Goldwyn's mother.

Jo Ann Sayres delighted to make a personal appearance with "Dr. Kildare" until she found she was appearing at Atlantic City, Wyo.—a ghost town of 100 souls!

When 250-pound song writer Gordon tucked himself cozily in a wheel chair at Treasure Island he looked 'round and said: "Gee, what do the poor people do?"

The college graduate attendant replied: "We push guys like you, sir."

Some years ago, Harpo Marx was attracted by faces made by a Lexington avenue cigar wrapper. Harpo's worn them out ever since. On his next trip East he'll try to locate the guy. He's run out of faces.

*I don't believe any debutante ever had the thrills Ruth Nagle got when she spent a month with Papa Conrad in New York. Everything broke right for her. Mob Sacks British Firm In Tientsin

Harried Britons Warn Americans, 'Your Turn Is Coming Soon'

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Aug. 4.—The sacking of a British firm's offices in Tientsin today highlighted development of the anti-foreign campaign in China which, many signs indicated, might soon take a definite turn against Americans and American interests.

A mob of Chinese, said by Britons to have been Japanese-instigated, attacked the Tientsin offices of the British International Export Corporation, smashed all moveable equipment and tossed it into the Hai River.

British and Chinese employes of the concern took refuge in adjoining property of the American-owned Texas Oil Co.

Harried Britons long have been telling Americans "your turn is coming soon," particularly since the United States abrogated her trade treaty with Japan July 26.

U. S. Consul Protests

The belief that such a turn of events was imminent grew with unconfirmed reports that United States Consul-General Clarence J. Spiker in Hankow had protested to the Japanese consultate general against anti-Americanism in Kaifeng, Honan province.

Britons recently have been forced by Japanese to leave Kaifeng, where there are extensive American mission properties and some United States commercial enterprises.

The unfriendly attitude of Japanese sentries toward Americans in Tsingtao has roused fears there that they soon will be victims of the anti-foreign campaign. Reports circulated that Japanese consulates would refuse further permits to Americans for travel in the Japanese-occupied sections of China in retaliation for treaty abrogation.

Britons Warned to Leave

Soon after today's anti-British violence in Tientsin, British residents of the blockaded British concession received letters from "the Chinese Patriotic Youth Association" warning them to leave Tientsin altogether since "the anti-British movement may develop into direct action which the Chinese government will not be able to control."

These were the first warnings to Britons residing within the concession, which has been under Japanese blockade since June 14.

Economic distress in Tientsin was heightened by a strike of butchers in the Japanese-controlled sections outside the city. It was reported to have been called because the Japanese monopoly refused to pay high enough prices.

Going against the general anti-British trend, Japanese authorities imposed restrictions on Tientsin Chinese-language newspapers against the publication of anti-British news, which has been extensive since the blockade was imposed. Some observers believed the order might have resulted from the British-Japanese negotiations in Tokyo where Britain insisted unfriendly propaganda must cease before important issues could be discussed.

Infiltration of Chinese irregulars into the Shanghai-Nanking area in preparation for major fighting was reported by Chinese sources which said troops were getting ready to attack railways, arsenals and Japanese bases in the region under nominal Japanese control since early in 1938.

Envoys Report To Tokyo on Axis Army Pact

Ambassadors to Rome, Berlin End 2-Day Talks, Await Instructions

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 4.—The Japanese ambassadors to Rome and Berlin today ended a two-day conference at Lake Como in which they were stated to have considered Japanese adherence to the Italian-German military alliance.

A Japanese informant said they had cabled a detailed report to Tokyo and would return to their posts tomorrow to await instructions from their government.

The possibility of increased Japanese collaboration with the Rome-Berlin axis is to be explored with Fascist and Nazi leaders by a delegation from Japan due August 26 in Naples.

The conference of the envoys from Rome and Berlin, Toshio Shiratori and Lieut. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, was seen as laying the groundwork for extensive military, political and economic discussions on the delegation's arrival.

Ambassadors Shiratori and Oshima conferred first and then invited their respective military advisers and counselors to join them. They also communicated during the day with other Japanese embassies in Europe to receive the latest reports on the European political and military situation.

Juliana Gives Birth to Girl, 3d In Line to Rule

Dutch Disappointed Crown Princess' 2d Baby Isn't a Boy

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam (Saturday), Aug. 5. Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands presented the House of Orange with another daughter early today.

The child was born at 1:15 a. m. (7:15 p. m. E. S. T. Friday), at Soestdyk Palace.

There had been high hopes among Netherlanders that the baby would be the first male heir to the throne of the little kingdom in almost half a century.

Princess Beatrix, the first child of the 30-year-old Juliana and 28-year-old German Prince Bernhard, was a year old last January 31.

Public Unaware

The hour was such that the general public, long anticipating the event, was not aware of the birth of the baby.

At 7 a. m. the news will be broken to the public by a salute of 51 guns—signifying the birth of a girl. A 101-gun salute would have been fired for a boy.

Disappointment, because of the absence of a male heir for the throne now, held by Queen Wilhelmina, was expected to be offset by loyal Netherlanders' joy over a royal birth when the event became generally known.

It was announced that the nation's official celebration of the royal birth would be held Monday.

The Netherlands people were expected to stage spontaneous demonstrations of their own as soon as the guns begin to boom tday.

Elabrate Preparations

Elaborate preparations had been made for the arrival of the royal heir.

Dr. D. De Groot, one of Juliana's physicians, took up residence in the palace last Saturday. A special detachment of military police early this week took over the regulation of traffic in the immediate neighborhood.

Despite constant interest in the international situation and preoccupation in the Netherlands' current cabinet crisis, detailed preparations were made for the country-wide celebrations of the royal birth.

Working class mothers whose babies are born today will be presented cradles by the royal family.

If the baby had been a boy the rights of Beatrix as heir-presumptive would have passed to him.

The last King of the Netherlands, William II, died in 1890. Wilhelmina became Queen then at the age of 10 under the regency of her mother.

Juliana will become Queen on the death or abdication of Wilhemina. She in turn will be succeeded by her eldest son, or if there were no son, by her eldest daughter.

Queen Wilhelmina, who was to have returned to The Hague to deal with the cabinet crisis, postponed her departure last night at the last minute to spend the night at Soestdyk.

It was announced the baby weighed 3,870 grammes, or about 8½ pounds. She was described as a "fine baby." The announcement said "mother and daughter both are doing well."

Holiday makers at resorts will hear the birth proclamation from heralds on horseback.

Japanese Raze Czarist Church

Special Dispatch to The Post

Tientsin, Aug 4.—The White Russian community in Tientsin is highly incensed over the demolition by the Japanese of the Bokrovskaia Church, a memorial built over the tombs of Russian soldiers killed in the Boxer uprising of 1900.

The church was closed at the end of 1937 by the order of the Japanese, but the Russians believed the closure was only temporary. Recently, however, they learned that the church was being torn down to provide a site for Japanese military construction. The Russian priest, Rogojin, accompanied by two Russian church members, visited the building to remove sacred images and ornaments, and discovered that the interior had been desecrated.

Danzig-Prussia Bridge Prepared

100 Hurt as Blast Rocks London Wholesale Area

London, Aug. 4 (AP).—London's wholesale district was shaken today by a gas explosion which injured more than 100 persons—four seriously—shook ancient St. Paul's Cathedral and demolished a vacant five-story building.

Police fixed the blame on rains which undermined foundations of the building, which sank, cutting a gas main.

Shortly afterward, an explosion occurred in a mail van at Preston Railway Station and a few minutes later fire broke out in a letter box.

May Send Fleet, England Warns Japan

Far East," he added significantly, "but I do not want to do that. This is a country whose resources it is very difficult to measure. It is a great, rich country, inhabited by people of a determined and resolute spirit, but there are limits to what it would be prudent to undertake."

Then, doubtlessly thinking of the tautening lines between the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo and the London-Paris-Moscow triangles, he continued:

"We must not forget that there may be even graver and nearer problems to be considered in the course of the next few months. We must conserve our forces to meet any emeregency which may arise."

Amid cheers, Chamberlain sat down to listen to the rest of the debate, of which the underlying theme was that Britain should cooperate more closely with the United States in meeting the Japanese menace to their interests in China.

Afterward, Chamberlain left to pass the week-end at Chequers, before proceeding north next week for a vacation in Scotland. The Commons adjourned at 4 p. m., closing what many observers believe has been the most important session in its history—a session which witnessed the abandonment of Briton's traditional foreign policy of "divide and rule" for one of "combine and conquer."

In this light, His Majesty's "Faithful Commons" approved British guarantees to Rumania and Greece, British alliances with Poland and Turkey, the initiation of alliance negotiations and staff talks with Soviet Russia, the grant of credits and loans totaling £31,703,000 (about $150,000,000) to Turkey, Poland, Rumania and Greece, the appropriation of record-breaking sums for accelerating rearmament and the introduction of limited conscription for the first time in Britain's peacetime history.

In a sense, Chamberlain's warning today of a naval demonstration or action against Japan was the most surprising of all developments. Hitherto, the British had treated Tokyo with the utmost politeness, hoping to avoid unwelcome entanglement in the Far East while Europe approached the so-called "dangerous months of August and September."

On the eve of the departure for Moscow of the British and French military missions, Chamberlain seemed to have new confidence about dealing more sternly with Japan. Yet, naval experts were puzzled by his reference to the possibility of strengthening the British fleet in the Pacific with Europe in the condition it is. It was pointed out that Britain's naval construction policy was still far from its goal of building a "two-hemisphere fleet," the goal mentioned three years ago by Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty.

East of Suez, at the present time, Britain's naval strength, according to a survey obtained at the admiralty today, is roughly as follows:

In Chinese waters—Three 8-inch gun cruisers, Kent, Cornwall and Dorsetshire; 1 6-inch gun cruisers, Birmingham, with another 6-inch gun cruiser of 10,000 tons, to go out shortly; 1 aircraft carrier, 1 destroyer flotilla of nine vessels; 6 escort vessels, 1 submarine flotilla (depot ship, destroyer and 15 submarines), 4 destroyers at Hongkong, 1 minelayer, 4 motor torpedo boats, 15 river gunboats on the Yangtse, and 5 gunboats on the West River.

In the Royal Australian Navy—Two 8-inch gun cruisers, Australia and Canberra; 4 6-inch gun cruisers, Sydney Perth, Hobart and Adelaide; 5 destroyers and two escort vessels.

In the New Zealand division of the Royal Navy—Two 6-inch gun cruisers, Leander and Achilles, and 2 escort vesesls.

On the East Indies station—Three large 6-inch gun cruisers, Gloucester, Liverpool and Manchester, and 6 escort vessels.

The Eastern Fleet is woefully deficient in capital ships, air-craft carriers, destroyers and submarines.

The problem is how many vessels could be sacrificed from the home, Mediterranean and reserve fleets without weakening the Anglo-French military line-up against Germany and Italy.

Speaking on the Anglo-Japanese formula for settlement of the Tientsin dispute, Chamberlain said that "in some aspects," the Tientsin problem did not look as though Britain would have "any great difficulty in coming to an agreement with the Japanese." He said this indicated the Japanese conducting the negotiations in Tokyo were by no means "so extreme or unreasonable as we have found so many Japanese in China itself."

Chamberlain insisted that Britain had made it clear to Japan that she could not settle with Japan alone at Tientsin with regard to the impounded Chinese silver and support for the Chinese currency without consulting other governments.

As for denunciation of the Anglo-Japanese trade treaty, he warned that this would have considerable repercussions in the British dominions because of their trade with Japan.

'Forced Toward' Axis, Says Japan

Tokyo, Aug. 4 (AP).—A high government official accused the United States and Great Britain today of joint pressure on Japan and declared "events are forcing" Japan toward a military alliance with Germany and Italy.

About Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration Britain might find it necessary "in certain circumstances" to send a fleet to the Far East, one naval officer said Britain "might send a few ships as a gesture" but it was unlikely she would do more.

It was stated that conclusion of a German-Italian-Japanese pact might come at any moment.

The official said by the "forcing" events he meant Washington's action July 26 in abrogating the 1911 American-Japanese trade treaty and British resistance toward setlement of currency issues in the conference here on the Tientsin dispute.

"Obviously the two attitudes are connected," he charged. "They indicate joint pressure on Japan whether the American and British governments actually are conferring or not.

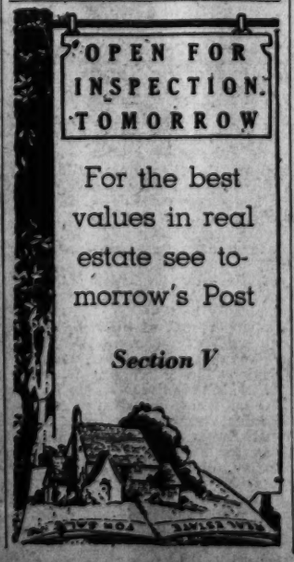
"We have been confidentially informed that Washington fears war in Europe in September and the treaty abrogation was done on the spur of the moment in order to clear the way for military assistance to Britain and France while withholding war materials from Japan. As long as the treaty is in existence this would have been legally impossible."

Paris, Aug. 4 (AP).—France stepped into the British-Japanese negotiations for settlement of China issues with a notice to Tokyo today that French interests were "linked" with those of Britain.

The foreign ministry disclosed that Charles Arsene Henry, French Ambassador to Tokyo, had visited the Japanese foreign office to point out formally the unity of French and British interests in the Orient.

He was understood to have expressed French readiness to take part in the British-Japanese talks, converting the Tokyo conference into a three-point parley.

A similar notice was said to have been given to London, in response to a British inquiry as to France's position concerning deposits of Chinese silver demanded by Japanese, in French and British banks in the British concession at Tientsin.



I LIKED GUNTHER'S BEFORE EXPERTS MADE IT FAMOUS

THEY SAY I LOOK PLEASED IN THIS PICTURE...WHY NOT? THAT'S A CAN OF GUNTHER'S IN MY HAND...THE BEST BEER I EVER TASTED!
IT WAS KIND OF NICE TO HAVE INTERNATIONAL EXPERTS AGREE WITH ME WHEN THEY SAY GUNTHER'S WAS THE EQUAL OF EUROPE'S BEST BEERS
GUNTHER'S IS ALL BEER... A MAN'S BEER....EVERY DROP....IT'S DRY AND BEER-Y... NEVER SWEET OR HEAVY!
UP-UP-GO GUNTHER'S SALES
as thousands discover dry, beer-y beer!
• All of Maryland and Washington, D.C. must have been waiting to hear the news about dry, beer-y Gunther's. Everywhere thousands are turning to Gunther's and away from "sweet" beers.
We've always claimed that Gunther's was as dry and beer-y as Europe's most famous beers. And this has been confirmed by the findings and expert opinions of dozens of International Beer Experts!
How Can Gunther's Do It At a Dime?
How can Gunther's offer such high quality beer at the price of regular beers? There are three big reasons: 1. Gunther's makes hundreds of thousands of BARRELS of beer . . . more than any other beer in this part of the country! This big volume means big savings on brewing costs. 2. Most all of Gunther's is sold right here in Maryland and D.C. . . . this means that no long haul shipping charges are added to the cost of Gunther's. 3. Most of it is delivered direct from the brewery to your dealer in our own trucks . . . another enormous saving, because breweries from other states have to pay as much as 30 to 50¢ per case to the wholesalers who handle their beer.
Put all these big savings together and you can see why folks around here can have Gunther's quality at a dime, whereas if you lived in New York, Milwaukee, St. Louis, etc. you would have to pay at least 15¢ per bottle for it.
Try Gunther's today. It is the only "Special Dry Lager" sold around here.

Challenge To Business

The rejection of the Administration's spending-lending program will of course affect unfavorably a good many concerns which stood to profit directly or indirectly from placement of Government orders. But the short-time depressing effects of a check upon pump-priming should weigh lightly against the more vital business stimulus resulting from the action of Congress. For in rejecting the spending-lending bill, Congress also rejected the fallacious theory upon which it was based: namely, that Government intervention is essential to mobilize savings and put them to productive use.

Private enterprise has now been given an opportunity to show what it can do to speed recovery without the aid of hypodermic injections. Conditions are exceptionally propitious for making the effort because the country appears to be entering a period of rising business activity. Indeed, Acting Secretary of the Treasury Hanes cites favorable reports from various sources, increased buying orders, and reduced inventories as evidence that we are on the verge of a "real forward movement."

While a temporary halt has been called to ambitious plans to expand the scope of Government spending and lending, nobody can afford to forget that they may be revived at the next session of Congress, especially if there is no marked improvement in activity in the interim. The challenge to private business is, therefore, very pressing to exert every effort to speed recovery on its own initiative.

Obviously it would be futile to urge individual businessmen to plan for expansion if they have no reasonable expectation of gain. But everybody knows that the tempo of business activity depends upon a great many intangible factors. When businessmen as a class are obsessed by fears of Government competition, restrictive regulation, or increased taxation they are inclined toward pessimism and reluctant to consider expansion. Investors are likewise unwilling to advance capital when there is a large element of uncertainty about the future. As a result of these immaterial deterrents to industrial progress, a low state of business activity tends to persist even when economic conditions are favorable to recovery.

A sloughing off of fear, an emergence from lethargy and scepticism of itself aids business. A hopeful outlook on the part of industrial leaders begets greater aggressiveness in seeking new orders, and engenders a changed attitude toward the possibilities of profit through expansion. A positive and generous effort to build amicable industrial relations and to provide a maximum amount of employment also helps business in general, even if it entails some individual sacrifices of immediate advantage.

In short, there are numerous ways in which businessmen can assist recovery without relying upon Government spending to prime the pump whenever it begins to creak. If they are wise, they will seize every possible opportunity to do so. For if business fails to meet the present challenge successfully, the alternative will certainly be a progressive advance of Government into fields hitherto reserved for private enterprise.

Strength In Experience

The failure of Congress to act on proposed amendments to the wage-hour law is a matter for congratulation rather than regret. That does not mean that the law is perfect in its present form. On the contrary, it needs to be greatly modified to make it administratively practicable and economically sound.

Congress, however, is in no mood on the eve of adjournment to deal intelligently with the rival proposals that are being pressed by friends and foes of wage-hour legislation. Tempers are ruffled and motives are suspect. Moreover, there is really no necessity for haste, as Administrator Andrews has been proceeding slowly with his investigation of various industries to decide where to set minimum-wage rates.

In a great many cases application of the provisions of the law has been shown to be administratively unenforceable. That is especially true of white collar workers in the higher-salaried groups, as the administrator has himself admitted. Given more experience, Mr. Andrews may perhaps change his mind again and advocate exemption of these workers from the provisions of the act. Certainly a barrage of criticism followed his confession that he had ceased to advocate such an amendment at the urging of organized labor.

Despite this vacillation, Mr. Andrews has heretofore shown excellent judgment in limiting his enforcement activities to that which is administratively possible. Very likely the law is now being disregarded to some extent. But as time passes the experience gained in applying regulations to specified industries will count more heavily, making it possible for Congress eventually to modify the law so that all its promise may be fulfilled.

Japan's Trial Balloon

The mysterious meeting at Lake Como of the Japanese Ambassadors to Germany and Italy, both men believed to be ardent partisans of the axis powers, has produced a decided fluttering in Europe's diplomatic dovecotes. For it suggests the possibility that Japan may, in the near future, conclude a military alliance with Germany and Italy.

So far as these two countries are concerned, there is much to be gained, little to be lost, in transforming the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle into a triple alliance. In that way Hitler and Mussolini would be assured of a very powerful partner in the event of a struggle with Great Britain and France. But there would be no comparable advantages to Japan in a military tie with the axis.

At the present time there is nothing to prevent Japan, without the handicap of a formal alliance, from capitalizing to her own advantage the state of tension created in Europe by Hitler and Mussolini. But her leaders also realize that their national interests lie wholly in the Far East, where neither Germany nor Italy is in any position to render the island empire any direct assistance. On the other hand, a Japanese alliance with the axis would undoubtedly tend to exacerbate the already strained relations with Great Britain, France and Russia and would possibly provide the necessary momentum to overcome the difficulties that have hitherto stood in the way of Russia's adherence to Britain's "peace front."

Why, then, the diplomatic meeting in northern Italy with the clear, if indirect, suggestion that it is designed to serve as the prelude for "closer adherence of Tokyo to the two axis powers?"

In part, no doubt, the meeting and its suggested purpose reflect the wishes of that powerful element in the Japanese army which, regardless of consequences, wants Japan to make an alliance with Hitler and Mussolini. Since the fall of Hankow last year the Japanese army has chalked up no major victories, but only lengthening casualty lists. And while the Anglo-Japanese protocol of last week was a minor triumph for Tokyo its usefulness has since been dissipated by Britain's refusal to consider the supplementary Japanese demands and by our own denunciation of the 1911 commercial treaty.

Hitherto the more sober elements in the army, as well as the civil leaders in Japan, have managed to fight off the demand for an alliance. Whether they will be able to continue to do so is not certain. The imminence of Anglo-French-Russian staff conversations suggests that difficulties which have hitherto stood in the way of an Anglo-Russian alliance may soon be overcome. In this connection it is significant that the Moscow government sets such great store by these staff conversations as to name the very highest Russian military, naval and air chiefs to participate in them.

The Japanese could hardly view the conclusion of an Anglo-Russian alliance with equanimity. The chances are that such an alliance would contain no reference to the Far East. The effect on the Far East might, nonetheless, be considerable, if only by safeguarding Russia's European borders and thus permitting her, at the proper moment, to play a more active role in Asia.

Thus any success which the Moscow conversations might have would constitute a real defeat for Tokyo and one which could not be disguised from the Japanese people. Possibly the Japanese army wants to be prepared with an offsetting card, such as an alliance with Germany and Italy, even though this trump would prove expensive and dangerous to play.

In the meantime the rumors of such an alliance, carefully floated both in Italy and Japan, are obviously designed to put a crimp in the Anglo-French-Russian negotiations. As so often during recent years, bluff may again be used as an instrument of policy.

At Copenhagen

In the diplomatic world of today there are no longer many really unimportant posts, and none of these are in Europe.

Our embassies at London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and Moscow outrank in prestige the embassies and legations maintained elsewhere on that continent. But some of the smaller capitals serve as excellent listening posts and observation towers. And responsibilities of the men accredited there are the greater because they are not continually in the limelight.

Thus is it that the appointment of Ray Atherton, as our Minister to Denmark, a post for long reserved for political appointees, is significant. Bulgaria, which Mr. Atherton leaves, is also an important spot these days but the absence of an American Ambassador in Berlin, and the increased importance of the Baltic area in European affairs, has made Copenhagen a doubly important diplomatic post. And as one of the ablest career men in our foreign service, Mr. Atherton may be expected to use his new opportunities to the very best advantage.

Indeed, a man of the well-rounded experience and the demonstrated caliber of Mr. Atherton is entitled to the very best assignments the Government's foreign service has to offer. There is no valid reason why the career men should still be outcasts so far as appointment to the most important embassies is concerned.

Rounding Out Reform

The newly enacted law which prohibits "pernicious political activities" is applicable to the Kentucky primary election today. And it is very likely to nullify improper pressures which may have been brought during recent weeks on relief workers or others susceptible to overt political influence. The provisions of the act are so specific as to make any attempt at intimidation or coercion of voters a very risky matter.

The fact that the Hatch law is having its first test in Kentucky is the more interesting because of the dominant role which machine organizations play in that State of superheated politics. Still fresh in memory is the furious clash of the State machine, controlled by Gov. Chandler, with that based on Federal patronage, controlled by Senator Barkley, when these two fought bitterly for the Senatorial nomination, just a year ago.

Thanks to the act which the President signed on Wednesday, the day of political machines built with the aid of Federal employes is ending. The Hatch law, extending the civil service regulations against political activity to unclassified employes, will see to that. But the exercise of similar pressure by State jobholders is still to be reckoned with. The moral is pointed by the current action of one of the candidates for the office of Governor of Kentucky. He has requested the attorney general of that State to "see to it" that State employes "do not violate the spirit" of the Hatch law.

The request is the more reasonable because the dissolution of a local machine composed of Federal employes is likely to accentuate the power, and the abuses, of a similar machine built out of State and local jobholders. The Kentucky primary of a year ago, for instance, would almost certainly have nominated Gov. Chandler for the Senate if Senator Barkley had not been able then to oppose the Governor's machine with a parallel organization.

The attorney general of Kentucky doubtless realizes the problem. But he would be able to do much more to forward the spirit of the Hatch law if he had legislation to invoke against "pernicious political activities" by State employes. Indeed a necessary corollary to the new Federal act is local legislation designed to supplement and round out the good start which has now been made in eliminating Government workers from active party politics.

For that reason the bill introduced by Senator Neely, of West Virginia, and approved Thursday by the Senate Civil Service Committee, is very important. It would extend the prohibitions of the Hatch act to all State employes paid in part from Federal funds, a procedure which is scarcely likely to be called in question on the score of constitutionality.

To round out and complete the important reform initiated by Senator Hatch the principles of his bill should be enacted for every State by its own Legislature. A decided stimulus to that end is provided by the Neely bill. Its introduction at the end of the current session is in part a constructive gesture. But there is good reason to have confidence in the Senator's prediction that his bill will follow that of Senator Hatch onto the statute books before the 1940 conventions take place.

Unlimited Liability

From the Latin American World, reprinted from Living Age.

Although you might not think so, the working of the "damages racket" is by no means peculiar to the civilized world. Some of the tribes of northern South America, for instance, have reduced it to a very fine art indeed, and their unwritten law of compensation is a very formidable thing. Like all laws, this one is made to be broken, but the trouble is that it is probably the easiest in the world to break. Here are some examples:

A wound inflicted in self-defense renders the striker liable if the attacker has not drawn blood first.

A man who has cut his finger with a knife borrowed from another is held to have a legitimate claim against the lender.

A man who is scaling your wall with burglarious intent and hurts himself in so doing has a perfect case for compensation against you, because your property was responsible (a) for his presence there, and (b) for his wounds.

If you give a man a drink and that man falls or otherwise hurts himself as a result of drunkenness, you are responsible for that damage.

And if you should find a sick or wounded man and render first aid, you are held responsible if he dies—because you interfered with Nature!

Liability, in fact, is unlimited.

Recovery Via Economy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Scuttling of the plan to extend deficit operation of Government, disguised as the spending-lending bill (or salvation via bankruptcy), finds Mr. Roosevelt running true to form.

His predictions of dire consequences to follow its defeat recalls a collection of former predictions in the same strain; the famous horse-and-buggy outburst being the first of a long series.

The present predictions are likely to be as inaccurate as they have been in the past, on taxation, neutrality, etc. For in nearly every case where a non-pump-primed recovery has struggled against heavy odds to get under way, it has met extinction when downed by a new outpouring of crackpotisms, aggravations and business baitings broadcast in the patented style of Harold Ickes.

Today only the turning loose on a defenseless community of a flock of blasters and business-baiters (as has been stupidly done in the past) is likely to disturb the mild business upturn now under way. In fact, it promises to expand. And its impetus would be still greater if Congress had further curtailed appropriations this session and used the ax on Government personnel and the financial drains made necessary for the upkeep of bureaucracy.

Who Laughs Last

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Press headlines—very large—"Huge Spending Program Defeated! Congress Triumphs Over Roosevelt!" Really? How interesting!

Those who triumph now, forget that he who laughs best laughs last. I can quite understand how Roosevelt is smiling, realizing with what effective material he has been provided for his Western trip. Should there be any reaction in the rise in business—which may well happen—it can and will be laid to a Congress whose imagination and mentality for the moment completely collapsed.

"Those whom the gods destroy they first make mad." And in this instance the gods certainly took an effective first step.

Challenging Civil Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The first amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press. Does the Hatch bill violate the first amendment?

To illustrate: Bill Jones is a Government employe, drawing a salary of $3,000 per year. He is thoroughly convinced that it is to the best interest of the country that Senator Solomon be elected President, and he is bitterly opposed to the election of Senator Sorghum. He wants to go on the stump and make speeches in favor of Senator Solomon and against Senator Sorghum.

He is told if he does he will be violating the provisions of the Hatch bill and will be discharged from his position. He is faced with a situation where he must lose his salary, which is the sole means of support for himself and family, or he must refrain from making speeches for or against any candidate, or taking any active part in elections or conventions. Can any one say that his right of freedom of speech has not been abridged?

Or suppose Tom Smith is another Government employe, who owns and edits a country paper. He writes editorials favoring Senator Sorghum and against Senator Solomon. He is discharged from his position. Is this abridgement of the freedom of the press? INQUIRER.

Refugee Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Bauer's recent letter anent the Spanish refugees is indicative of the humanitarian generosity of our American people to help those in unfortunate circumstances, and the impulse to do so is a praiseworthy characteristic of our country. But despite the fact that this relief is sponsored by an imposing list of our most representative citizens, headed by the name of a Cabinet member, I feel constrained to question the motives of the estimable gentlemen who write, "First, we can see to it that not a man or woman now in the French camps whom Franco wants for his prisons or firing squads is sent back to Spain."

Could it be possible that the signers of this letter presume that Franco's policy of reconstructing war-torn Spain is a negative one of vindictiveness. Or perhaps the authors of the letter feel that the refugees are guilty of misdemeanors worthy of prisons and firing squads. Perhaps Mr. Ickes thinks Franco would perpetrate an injustice against the refugees.

To continue the quotation, "And since they cannot remain permanently in France, we must bring them across the ocean. Mexico and other Latin-American countries are willing to receive them." Would the socialistic regime in Mexico be more suitable to their democratic natures? The prophetic genius of the Russian revolution once said that communism would be established first in Russia, then in Spain, then in Mexico, then in the United States. Since many Americans are now coming to realize that the enlightened regime of the so-called "Loyalist" government of Premier Juan Negrin was in reality a satellite of Moscow, we may now have reason to pray that Mexico will not became the battlefield for the next proletarian revolution.

The prospective contributors to the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign would do well to ask whether "Hippocrates would play second fiddle to Marx." Would it not be better to consider those poor unfortunates at home, the third of our own nation, who are in dire need of employment, of food, hospitalization, housing and clothing? Charity still begins at home, and we do not have to look very far for those who would be worthy recipients of our benefactions. JOHN J. MORRISON.

On Destroying Slums

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Paul Merton, in his letter published in The Post on July 30, has a simple so-called solution to the slum problem. Condemn slum buildings by utilizing the police power of a city, and throw them down. If we tried this method we would find thousands of slum buildings torn down and many slum tenants homeless.

On the sites vacated by these slum homes fine residences would undoubtedly be built. These, however, would rent at higher prices than the old homesteads and the former slum dwellers would be unable to pay the higher rentals. Where, then, would they live?

The solution to the slum problem is the decentralized program of the United States Housing Authority calling for Federal and local cooperation, under which one slum unit is eliminated for each new unit built to rent solely for families of low income residing in sub-standard dwellings.

Praise For The President

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Hatch bill becomes a law of the land and to quote the words of President Roosevelt: "The bill is in harmony with the policy that I have consistently advocated during all my public life, namely, the wider extension of Civil Service as opposed to its curtailment."

Here Mr. Roosevelt played an ace if there ever was one. Though it might have signed his own political death warrant so far as a third term goes, he proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is one of the greatest statesmen of all time. Here was the superstatesman at work, the same one who on three different occasions stopped the mad dogs of Europe from plunging the whole world into a conflagration of hell.

The next campaign will be an important one in American history, for either we will go forward under progressive leadership or revert to the reactionary tutelage of Wall Street puppets. The President, because of his overwhelming popularity with the common people, realizes that he may be the only one to carry forward the banner of social and economic justice; and he also knows that a strong political machine would go far in helping him attain that end. If, however, it would be accomplished at the expense of vetoing the "clean politics bill," he apparently would prefer to withdraw in favor of the latter.

Mr. Roosevelt may or may not become the next President of the United States. But, regardless of whether or not he does, it is pretty definite that he has set a new standard as Presidents go.

Expression Of Thanks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to express my profound thanks, and also on behalf of the many unorganized foreign-born residents, to Miss Elizabeth Lyle, who, as a typical American woman, takes a magnanimous attitude toward those who have come to America, not for the land nor for its wealth, but to breathe and live in its free mental atmosphere.

Right here is where these very searchers for freedom may in turn be allotted to do the work of preserving that atmosphere uncontaminated by the very human tendency to degenerate as soon as a revolutionary period is over and ease, pleasure and fun once more become general.

Relatively few foreign-born (naturalized or not) become so engrossed in the mere "good-time" illusion as to overlook the need of "vigilance as the price of liberty." And, of course, that is the sane, morally sound state of mind, for which America can afford to rejoice.

And since many of the laws are now claimed to have become archaic, who shall say that this may not be also true of the laws for naturalization? And if this can be proven, it is no fault of their own that many are left without papers for legalized citizenship. Should they be ostracized or otherwise jeopardized, as Miss Lyle writes, by being asked to show "their fingerprints at every turn?"

Again, if it is right and logical to revoke the citizenship of those who have proven unworthy of the same, why is it not right to confer honorary citizenship upon those whose worth may be even more than the average standard maintained by a common majority? This would be the application of mathematics in law and government.

The Post Impressionist

"What Gets Me . . ."

THE ACCIDENT must have occurred several minutes before we arrived, for no sound of a crash reached our ears. We came upon it one cold clear night in late winter, when a full moon had transformed an ordinarily desolate spot into something from another world. Silence ghostly as the night itself shrouded the twisted wreckage and twisted bodies. It was unreal, something dreamed. And this dreamlike quality overcast the scene and all that happened there through hours of tragedy and farce, through death and hysterical terror, through a moonlit, slightly maudlin coroner's inquest and the ghoulish peering of passers-by. Weird and unforgettable it all was, yet a little gray ghost of a man has remained with me more vividly than any other person or incident.

When I first noticed him, the wreckage had been partially cleared away and the inquest completed. By that time a good many persons had gathered, who, having examined the ground thoroughly, were busily asserting or defending various explanations of the tragedy. Others, more recently arrived, had formed an awed yet somehow happy circle about some of the more irreparably damaged human wreckage at the roadside. From this group the little gray man appeared and proceeded to an inspection of the cars involved in the accident. He was noticeable solely because of his proprietary air and the alert, sparrow-like way in which he viewed the wreckage.

For a while I lost track of him. He soon reappeared, though, this time at the side of one of my companions, and engaged in earnest conversation. "Some crack-up!" he chirped, peering intently upward.

"Yes, pretty bad."

"You boys were the first ones here, they say. That right?"

"That's right."

"Guess you had your hands full. I come up right after you but somebody stopped me and sent me back after the cops."

I did not encourage him much and presently he turned elsewhere. He must have made a pretty exhaustive inquiry into all aspects of the collision.

Later he appeared at my elbow, whence he fixed an eager gaze on me and asked whether I had stopped some cars soon after the crash. I admitted that I had.

"Remember a black sedan with a red stripe?"

"No, though I might have stopped one."

"Well, did you send some car back after the cops?" he asked patiently.

"I sent several cars back for different things, but don't remember one from another."

This seemed very unreasonable to my questioner, who mentioned the red stripe again, but he was forced to let the more positive identification go.

"I'm sure you're the one that stopped me," he said.

"I don't doubt it at all."

This still did not please him, but he sighed a forgiving sort of sigh and held out his hand.

"You must be the one. Anyway, I appreciate all that you did."

I failed to understand his gratitude, and must have shown my bewilderment. At any rate, he immediately clarified his position.

"One of my boys was in the wreck. I just found it out a little while ago. When I went back to get the cops I stayed for awhile. So I didn't hear who was in the wreck 'til John over there called and said one of my sons got hurt. When I heard that I come back on out. Funny, you stopping me to get help for my own son—and me not even knowing he was there."

"Yes, that is rather strange. Did you find out how he was?"

A bewildered expression crossed his face and he spoke rather hesitantly, "I don't know how bad he was hurt. I guess he's up to the hospital now, isn't he? They say Ed took him up there along with that other fellow."

"They're both at the hospital now, all right. I'm afraid your son is in pretty bad shape, though."

"Yeah, I guess so. You know, what gets me, I don't know for sure which son it is." He wandered off after this.

I saw him once more. Just before we left he was talking to a group that had served on the coroner's jury. As we passed, his voice, clear and triumphant, came through the night. "It must have been Joe. I just remembered—Bill was working at the garage tonight."

Tidying-Up

Since spring first came I've been getting at the task of cleaning my desk. Now, on the last day before I cease all attempts at cerebration and take on the habits of a vegetable, my desk is just where it was.

There is only one thing to do; and I forthwith do it. With a slow relentlessness my arm moves from right to left; and into the waiting wastebasket go all the documents I had laid aside for further study. For the first time in many months, the surface of the desk is visible; and if my conscience is not clear it is less oppressive.

Hattie Rules The Roost

GEORGE SPELVIN, American, and his ever-loving have been having the devil's own time with old Hattie, the pot walloper who has been working around their bower these last 15 years or so. Hattie joined a housemaids' union, and now she goes around the flat muttering dirty cracks about George and his old lady, and if they are late for dinner old Hat will yank off her apron at quitting time and leave them in mid-air. They can't fire her; they can't say aye, yes or no to her, and they can't even go out in their own kitchen and wrestle the rest of the meal together and serve themselves, because they are executives in the meaning of the act. Only union people are allowed to do Hattie's work.

The Spelvins don't really rate a hired girl at all, because his pay is 'way down and there are only he and his old lady at home. Ella—that's the daughter—she got married, and young George is in the Navy. Spelvin thought of giving Hattie the wind back in 1931 when he was out of a job himself, but she was a pathetic old bag in a way, and he kept her on because she had nowhere to go. She worked any old hours at all, and Mrs. Spelvin always gave a hand with things around, but, nevertheless, old Hat put in plenty of hours. It just never occurred to the Spelvins that such help had the same rights and aspirations as other labor.

Contract Signed With Old Hattie

MR. SPELVIN was the surprisedest guy you ever saw when a union delegate called and demanded that George sign a contract with Hattie through him as bargaining agent. George tried to stall, but the bargaining agent said, "Have it your own way, but if you don't sign we will get you fired from your own job."

"You and who else?" George said. "Consolidated Widget wouldn't fire George Spelvin, the average American, for resisting dictation in his private life."

"Well, how long do you think Consolidated is going to keep you after we declare a Nation-wide boycott on their widgets for employing an enemy of labor?" the guy said.

George saw the guy had him, so he signed for a year. He raised Hattie's pay from 8 bucks to 12, gave her a 5-day 40-hour week, agreed that she mustn't touch the washing any more, as that work belongs to the Laundry Workers Union, and consented to a written stipulation that she couldn't be fired for reasons of economy, even if he should lose his own job, although Hattie has more than $3,000 in the savings bank and the Spelvins haven't got a dime, except from week to week.

Spelvins Are Cited For 'Intimidation'

HE EVEN HOCKED his insurance back in the panic, and now he can't get any on account of something about his liver. He can't fire her for poling out her lip or putting on the glare every time they ask her to do anything, and it drives them near nuts to go out in the kitchen and read bulletins which old Hat addresses to herself calling the Spelvins all kinds of louses and gyps. All the time she mutters about how it would be a good idea if somebody should put poison in a certain party's soup, but she doesn't come right out and say what party or say she is going to do it herself, so they can't even can old Hat for that. It would be an invasion of her freedom of speech.

A couple of weeks ago George got sentimental and said, "Hattie, what for do you want to be acting like this on account of a union when we been just like a family together all these years?"

Well, whammo, two days later he gets cited and old Hat is a witness that he tried to intimidate her out of the union. So George said, "This board has no jurisdiction, as my bower is not interstate commerce," but the guy knocked his ears down by saying it was interstate commerce to cook his meals and make his bed, because he required food and repose to manufacture widgets, which are sold in interstate commerce.

Divot Taken Out Of George's Scalp

THAT NIGHT old Hat got drunk as a fool and held a victory parade in front of the Spelvins' little flat with a lot of other hired girls, and somebody heaved a gin bottle through a window. It took a divot out of George's scalp, but the union said he did it himself to discredit labor.

George was thinking he could stand it for a year and then he would can old Hat by just refusing to renew the contract. It would cost him 15 weeks' pay at $12 a week in dismissal money, but he figured he could rustle it up somehow and thought it would be worth it. But a lawyer friend tells him if he cans old Hattie the union will send someone ten times worse and he can't just abolish the job and let his old lady do the work, because that would make it a scab shop, and the union would boycott Consolidated Widget and get him fired and make it impossible for him to get a job anywhere else.

George Spelvin and his old lady figure that they are stuck for life under an old she-devil going around their bower calling them louses under Government auspices, and it makes them sad. They figure they are average Americans, and they never did anything to the Government, or old Hattie, either, for that matter.

Labor Act Survives Critics' Blasts

Unchanged Despite 7 Months of Fighting In Congress Hearings

By the United Press.

The storm-tossed national labor relations act last night emerged from Congress unchanged despite seven months of unremitting efforts by its critics to change it to a form they believe necessary to bring about industrial peace.

The Senate Education and Labor Committee, and its corresponding group in the House, held hearings almost from the time the Seventy-sixth Congress convened without reaching an agreement on any changes.

The hearings will reopen in January to receive statements of Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and C. I. O. President John L. Lewis. They will oppose amendments urged by a group of American Federation of Labor leaders, who have contended the NLRB has favored the C. I. O. over their unions.

Adjustment Predicted

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas, of the Senate committee, said that despite "fighting words" uttered by many angry witnesses, he is hopeful differences between the C. I. O and A. F. L., independent labor unions and little businessmen may be reconciled within the confines of the act as it now stands.

Facts brought out at the hearings, he said, were directly responsible for recent revisions and clarifications of NLRB policy. They presented all the data needed for working out an intelligent national labor policy, he added.

General Counsel Lee Pressman, of the C. I. O., final witness, emphasized that his group will not compromise its opposition against the proposed amendments.

Changes Seen as Futile

"I fear that the NLRB is going forward on the basis of fear of the charges that have been made against it," he said. "In doing so, it may be laying the basis for greater industrial chaos than has ever been known before."

Senator Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, who frequently has acted as chairman of the committee, said it would be "futile" to amend the act, because revisions whenever complaints arise will result in perpetual "seesaw" of opposition as one side or the other insists changes must be made.

Ninety per cent of the present trouble, he said, can be cured by a fuller definition of board policy, plus peace between the C. I. O. and A. F. L. which are fighting bitterly for control of organized labor.

Roosevelt Says He'll Name Two More Assistants

President Roosevelt said yesterday he intended to appoint two additional $10,000-a-year administrative assistants, one of whose qualifications must be a "passion for anonymity." This will bring the total to five.

The sixth place, he explained, will be left open. It probably will be filled temporarily from time to time, he indicated, by various individuals called in to handle special assignments.

When the two assistants will be named he would not say. There has been some speculation that Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin V. Cohen, Administration "trouble-shooters," might be appointed. Expectation, however, is that they will remain in their present jobs.

Trucking Work Of Minors Studied

A hearing to determine whether truck driving and helping on trucks are hazardous occupations for minors between 16 and 18 under child-labor regulations will be opened by the Children's Bureau, Labor Department, at 10 a. m. August 18.

The bureau yesterday said it would seek testimony about what types of work are performed by helpers on trucks, to what extent persons under 18 are employed in the two occupations, and what are their hazards.

California Indians To Oakies

WHAT "MAIN STREET" and "Babbitt" were to the '20s John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath" seems to be for this decade; and what "Middletown" was to "Main Street," Carey McWilliams' "Factories in the Field" (Little, Brown, $2.50) is to "The Grapes of Wrath."

Carey McWilliams is a crusading Los Angeles lawyer and California's new State Commissioner of Immigration and Housing. He wrote this book before he became commissioner and before "The Grapes of Wrath" was published; but the studies behind it must provide a rare preparation for his present job, and the story here told dovetails into and amplifies the Steinbeck novel almost miraculously.

For this is the story of the California fruit and vegetable industry, which is unique in America and in the world. To most Easterners "California" spells vaguely a soft-breezed seacoast and snow-capped ranges of green mountains; but the real economic life of California goes on in the hot valleys between the Sierras and the sea. There California's significant battles have been and are being fought; there California's future lies. It is, as readers of John Steinbeck's novel know, a land beautiful and damned, sun-kissed and gun-kissed, a rich land where good men may starve.

Some Eastern critics have doubted the accuracy of John Steinbeck's facts; in California they are all too aware of the truth, though they may argue that it is not the whole truth. The California attitude toward Steinbeck is curiously mixed; not even Southerners have a fiercer local pride, and they know that John Steinbeck, whose novel leads all the best-seller lists, is a home-State boy. So, for that matter, is Carey McWilliams. But home-State pride may falter when it bumps against the ancient facts of California land ownership.

Mr. McWilliams has waded through the farm journals of early California decades and the official reports; he paints a vivid picture of a great agriculture industry which has never supported its own labor. Away back in 1871 Henry George described the army of "tramps, with blankets on back, the laborers of the California farmer, looking for work, in its seasons, or toiling back to the city when the plowing is ended or the wheat crop is gathered."

Wheat was replacing cattle as California's great industry in Henry George's day, and wheat in those days demanded an immense seasonal army who could only be tramps for the rest of the year. One wheat farm in the San Joaquin Valley was vaunted as the largest farm in the world; one farm in Colusa County was 90 miles wide; Henry Miller, a German immigrant, was assembling an estate which became larger than the Kingdom of Belgium.

DIGGER INDIANS were the first laborers on those immense farms; after the railroads had been built, the armies of Chinese coolie labor which had laid the steel rails poured into the fields. The big land owners wanted cheap nomad labor, and coolies looked good to them. As early as 1850 California had its squatter riots; the squatters lost. Mr. McWilliams interpreted the vigilante movement as in part a landlords' effort to keep small settlers down. Irrigation became large-scale in the '70s; farming on irrigated land is, of course, a process which requires large capital and large land units. And the first refrigerated car, coming to California in 1888, heralded, though few foresaw it, a new era of mixed prosperity and tragedy for the irrigated valleys.

Chinese, Mr. McWilliams holds, taught California much of what it has learned about orchard farming; the Armenians taught it how to grow grapes, and the Japanese are experts in vegetable culture. The big land owners at first welcomed all these forms of alien labor but grew resentful when patient peons organized to demand white men's wages, or sought to own land themselves. And the Dingley tariff of 1907, with its heavy protection for sugar, laid the foundation for another type of field-factory—sugar-beet cultivation.

The lean years of the '90s brought the miners out of the mountains, and the Chinese were ousted from the fields. The alien land act of 1915, as Mr. McWilliams sees it, "was designed to consolidate and safeguard large ownership units in California;" at any rate, it kept the Japanese, the best small farmers in the world, out. The high tide of Mexican immigration came in the 1920s, but when the California cities discovered that they had to support through the winter months the Mexicans who earned a bare subsistence on the land in summer, a new conflict arose, and the cities demanded that the border be closed. The Mexican government co-operated in repatriating its own. And now, last of all, comes the army of the "Okies," refugees from the tractor factories of Mid-western farms and from the dust bowl.

CALIFORNIA has a history of violence. Mr. McWilliams outlines the sadistic manner in which its officers have treated revolting workers on the land, and analyzes the various factors—notably differences of race—which have made organization of farm laborers so difficult. He traces the rise of the Associated Farmers, that misnamed organization of field-factory financiers which has played so violent a part in recent conflicts and explains its animus against Harry Bridges. He goes back into the past, traces the story of early attempts to settle the unemployed on the land, and discusses the recent role of relief (often manipulated for the benefit of these financial "farmers") and then briefly hints at solutions he deems possible.

Well, California is facing its problem today. It has an army of 250,000 gasoline gypsies, and it knows it cannot harvest its crops without them. Most of California knows that it cannot whip them into working for nothing. Now Carey McWilliams, who has so provocatively analyzed the problem, is State Commissioner of Immigration and Housing and John Steinbeck's novel has aroused the Nation to the bitter drama of California's problem. The sequel to this book is in the making.

FactsDoomed Housing Act

By Mark Sullivan

Not "Self-Liquidating"

FOR CONGRESS' REJECTION of the housing bill there were several reasons. One can be identified definitely. The bill purported to be an "$800,000,000 housing bill." That is the way it has been described for weeks, in speeches, statements and newspapers.

Of course, those who draft any measure must necessarily use technical and legal terms. They cannot be held responsible for the loose phrases by which popular talk and print describe the bills. No one can charge indubitably that the housing bill was written with intent to deceive. The obscurity of it, or the double-meaning of it, may have just happened, naturally, as a result of the technical language that had to be used, the intricate provisions that had to be included.

Those who wrote the bill can defend themselves against any charge of misleading by pointing out one simple, convincing fact: When finally the bill was read with analytical care by one Congressman, he was able to find that it was much more than an "$800,000,000 bill"—and by pointing that out to Congress, was largely responsible for the defeat of the measure.

THE BILL WAS also described as "self-liquidating," which would mean that all the money paid out, or guaranteed, by the Government, would be paid back. That term, "self-liquidating," was more or less official. It was used by President Roosevelt himself in the recent message in which he asked Congress to pass this and similar appropriations. The word "self-liquidating" was also used by officials of the Housing Authority, the Government agency which wanted the bill and would administer it if passed. In the debate in Congress, an official of the Housing Authority was quoted as having said that the $800,000,000 provided by the bill was "absolutely returnable, every dollar, with interest;" that the bill would "not cost the public a penny."

This was the impression Congress had. Under this impression, most of Congress was sympathetic to the measure. But the day the bill was up in the House, a young Democratic Congressman from Tennessee, Mr. Albert Gore, arose and showed clearly that the project was not self-liquidating, and that it would cost several times 800,000,000. He said:

The United States Housing program is in no respect self-liquidating. It is not contemplated that any revenue from any project will ever be returned to the United States Government . . . The United States Housing Authority is guilty of disseminating the most reprehensible misleading information."

WHEN MR. GORE concluded his analysis of the bill, and condemnation of it, he received conspicuous applause—and the bill was doomed. (Incidentally Mr. Gore's performance shows that a young Congressman serving his first term, can, by intelligence and industry, impress himself on the body, with his first speech, and push himself to the front.)

There is, as often, a partial explanation of the difference between what the bill seemed to be, and what it was. The bill provided $800,000,000, to be loaned to cities and other agencies, for building houses. That $800,000,000 for building really was returnable by the cities, absolutely. It was to be paid back to the Government in 60 annual installments.

But at the same time, and in the same contract, the Government was to do another thing. It was to pay to the cities annual contributions for 60 years. These annual payments of the Government to the cities were greater than the payments of the cities to the Government. In the net, the cost to the Government over a period of 60 years would be about $2,700,000,000, none of which would be repaid.

The explanation made by friends of the bill, quite accurately, was that the cost of the buildings was one thing—while the annual payments by the Government to cities were a separate thing. These annual payments by the Government were for the purpose of enabling the cities to rent the houses to persons unable to pay an ordinary rent. The annual contributions by the Government were, so to speak, a subsidy by the Government to the rent of low-income families. The Government would lend $800,000,000 to build the houses—and would get that back. At the same time the Government would give $2,700,000,000 to subsidize operation of the houses for 60 years—and would get none of that back.

BUT AFTER ALL explanation, the fact remains that the housing bill was going to cost the Government about four times what it purported to cost. This amount, not self-liquidating, seemed to Congress excessive. But even more, Congress felt it was being misled. Congress has come to feel that the New Deal is sometimes artful with words. They have found that when, in the early days of the New Deal, they were passing measures written out by New Dealers without scrutinizing them, they put on the books some things they would not have enacted if they had fully understood them.

It is a fact that the New Deal sometimes practices adroitness with words. An example is the use recently of the term "Government investing." They use this newly invented term to describe and justify many of the expenditures of the Government. But what they now describe as "Government investing" is the same thing which, a few years before, Mr. Roosevelt described and vehemently denounced under the old terms, "Government spending" and "borrowing" and "deficits."

Increasing Tempo

By Barnet Nover

The Powers Struggle for Advantage

IN HIS STATEMENT in the House of Commons announcing the immediate start of military and naval staff consultations at Moscow by the strategists of Great Britain, France and Russia, Prime Minister Chamberlain emphasized the unusual nature of this action.

When two countries negotiate an alliance the most invariable procedure is for them to establish a political basis of agreement first and then to proceed to a military convention detailing precisely what each is prepared to do to assist the other in the event of war.

This time, however, the British and the Russians are to discuss the nature and extent of military co-operation concurrent with the discussion of the political problems which must be solved before the alliance can be made. The British premier was thus correct in saying that "we have done something which must, I think, be almost without precedent in history in negotiations of this kind."

THE RUSSIANS have since emphasized how important they consider these staff conversations by naming their most important technicians, including War Commissar Voroshiloff, to the forthcoming parley.

The assumption is, therefore, that the Soviet government is now prepared to carry through the negotiations with Great Britain to a successful conclusion while insisting, however, that the military convention and the political accord be reached simultaneously.

In taking this position the Russian leaders were no doubt moved by the Soviet government's experience with France. France and Soviet Russia have been allies since 1935. But every effort which Moscow made to get France to implement this alliance by a military convention was rebuffed.

Not even at the time of the Czecho-Slovak crisis last year, when the fate of the nation that was Russia's as well as France's ally was at stake, did France agree to Russia's request for staff conversations. The Soviet leaders haven't forgotten that fact which is probably why they have insisted this time that the ordinary procedure in alliance negotiations be reversed.

BE THAT AS it may, the prospective start of Anglo-French-Russian staff negotiations is a further indication of the increasing tempo in world affairs. Should Russia now come into the "peace front" the commitments she would assume would be limited to Europe. The repercussions would, however, be strongly felt in Asia as well. Indeed, there is probably more than a coincidence that the announcement of the Anglo-French-Russian staff conversations was followed shortly by renewed rumors that Japan may form an alliance with Germany and Italy.

Europe and Asia are now more than ever one continent, politically speaking, nor is the United States outside the sphere of power politics. We are affected by every major move made on the diplomatic checkerboard and, in turn, every move we make has a bearing on the world situation.

IN TOKYO an unnamed high government official told the press that Japan is being forced toward an outright alliance with Germany and Italy because of our abrogation of the 1911 commercial treaty.

This may and may not be the case. Japan has been under pressure for a considerable time to pool her military and naval strength with the axis powers. Germany and Italy would like nothing better than to have Japan keep the European democracies fully occupied in the Far East so that they would be less able to resist Hitler and Mussolini in Europe. So far, nothing has come of this effort to create a German-Italian-Japanese alliance, in part because the wiser heads at Tokyo have seen not the slightest advantage to Japan in such an arrangement; in part because Germany has been anxious to do nothing to force Russia into Great Britain's arms.

THE LONDON announcement of the opening of staff discussions in Moscow has undoubtedly given the axis powers and Japan a jolt. They must now consider an Anglo-Russian alliance as a real possibility and if they cannot prevent it they are under compulsion to offset it as best they can. The rumors of Japan's joining the axis may possibly be preventive in their purpose but it is also likely that if these rumors fail to do the job an actual alliance may emerge. The jolt that an Anglo-Russian alliance would give Japanese public opinion, on top of the chagrin and consternation caused by America's action on the 1911 treaty, makes it necessary for the Japanese militarists to indulge in a dramatic counter-stroke, however unwise or dangerous it may be to Japan in the long run.

IN ANY EVENT, international balance of power is no longer European but world-wide; the system of alliances which, at the outbreak of war just a quarter of a century ago this week, was limited in its application to Europe, now threatens to cross continental frontiers.

It is certainly a possibility that in the very near future an Anglo-French-Russian combination will confront a German-Italian-Japanese bloc. And no nation, however eager for neutrality or wedded to an isolationist creed, will be unaffected by the tug of these opposing aggregations of force.

Roosevelt to Hold An Open House For Congressmen

President Roosevelt said yesterday he would remain in Washington for a couple of days after Congress adjourns to hold open house for any Senators and Representatives who may tarry to discuss particular matters with him.

Then he will go to Hyde Park where he will remain for about a week, signing or rejecting the flood of last-minute bills. He will then board a cruiser, probably at New York, for a cruise of a week or 10 days, returning at the end of the cruise to Washington.

Mr. Roosevelt said he would start on his trip to the West Coast around October 1.

The President has made no plans for taking to the country the issues which have arisen between him and Congress, such as the defeat of the lending bill. He has scheduled only two speeches, he said, one at the World's Fair at San Francisco and one dedicating the Great Smoky Mountain National Park.

N. Y.-Cleveland Team Wins Bridge Tourney

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 4 (AP).—Winning nine out of 16 hands in the playoff, the team of Alvin Landy and Miss Florence Stratford, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Valerie Klein and Robert Chatkin, of New York, took the national title for mixed teams of four in the National Contract Bridge Tournament today. They defeated a Philadelphia foursome, Mrs. J. J. Mitchell 3d, E. C. Ellenbogen, Mrs. Benjamin Golder and Charles J. Solomon who had tied them at the end of the regular match Tuesday.

Curiosity Makes Most Dope Addicts, Says U. S. Doctor

Far more narcotic addicts acquire the habit through curiosity and association with other addicts than by accident, as in the case of an ill person receiving opiates for relief of pain, the United States Public Health Service stated yesterday.

Dr. M. J. Pescor, in a new publication issued by the health service, reported that only 3.8 per cent of the 1,036 patients he studied at the Federal hospital for narcotics users at Lexington, Ky., could be classified in the "accidental" group and, he added, "Even this low figure is probably too high."

"Patients classified with the curiosity and association group, however, constitute 54.5 per cent of the group studied. These might very well be termed 'average addicts,'" he wrote.

3,400 Enrollees Leave Ft. Meade C. M. T. C. Camp

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Aug. 4 (AP).—Breakfast was served earlier than usual here today, but 3,400 youths enrolled in the annual Citizens Military Training Camp probably didn't mind getting up for it—they were paid off immediately and left for home.

Yellowstone Routine Normal, But Only 39 Are Bear-Bitten

56 Were Nipped by This Time Last Year; 276,385 Visit Park and Officials Predict Record of Half Million Will Fall This Summer

Things are going on about as usual in Yellowstone National Park this year, nine press releases from the Interior Department indicated yesterday. This is what has been happening:

Four out of 23 fires have been started by cigarette smokers, but hot weather and lightning have raised the fire total far above the total of 12 for 1938.

By the end of July, 276,385 persons had visited the park, and Superintendent Rogers said he thought the summer total would break half a million for the first time.

Thirty-nine persons were bitten by bears against 56 for the same period last year. The bear victims were probably violating feeding rules or snapping pictures, officials declared.

Rangers are beginning to call the 200-foot Grand Geyser "bashful" because it kept visitors waiting 120 hours at the height of the season after spouting at two-hour intervals when no strangers were around.

A heavy rain set off all the geysers in Norris Basin. Normally quiet pools turned muddy and boiled, while Big Lodge Geyser tossed rocks around like baseballs during a 16-hour spree.

Modest little Tom Thumb Geyser lured a couple of greenhorns into thinking it was a drinking fountain, but a ranger saved them before they got their tongues scalded.

CCC boys have gone from fire-fighting to work on new camping areas at Old Faithful Geyser and Mammoth Hot Springs, and a trailer camp extension near the fishing bridge.

A daily average of 50 anglers are manning Fishing Bridge, standing at 6-foot intervals, and catching up to 450 fish a day.

The park is full of wild animals. Mrs. H. B. Clark, of LaMesa, Calif., counted 24 bears, 24 buffalo, 81 elk, 10 moose, 2 woodchucks, 2 antelope and a beaver during an 11-hour trip around the north loop.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Lines From The Week-End Tourist's Heart

Over the hill and far away—
Such is my notion, Sabbath day;
The open road! Ah, kid, you said it;
So off I am—and how I dread it!

I love the summer,
When touring is my wont;
I also love the winter,
When tourists simply don't.

To blaze new trails
Is called hot stuff;
You blaze 'em boy—
I'm not enough.

I love my faithful flivver,
And if I give it oil
And water, it's contented
That I alone should boil.

It's sturdy, swift and nifty—
Well worth its builder's art;
Ah, long before it weakens
I know I'll fall apart.

To seaside, to seaside
To find a cool spot!
Home again, home again,
Since I did not!

What joy to ride the open road
Past balsam, fir and pine,
Rotisserie, hot-dog stand,
Red light and detour sign!

What fun to leave the city
And seek the rolling shore,
Where traffic's twice as deadly
And traffic sings are more!

I love my little week-end tour
In weather that is warm—
And if I do not take it
'Twill not do me much harm!

Mother, call the kiddies!
Sister, get the pup!
We're going to the country,
Down rolling hills, and up.

Pack in the lunch and camp kits,
Like gypsies we shall roam;
I know I shall enjoy it—
For I shall stay at home!

How wondrous is a motor car!
Without it, lad, could I
Find comfort, rest and pleasure? . . .

Jade Housecoat

Behind the door her long housecoat of jade
Hangs ready; when a caller rings she leaves
Her mixing bowl and, regally arrayed,
Conceals her gingham and her roll-up sleeves.
The neighbors find her smilingly alert,
Meeting the moment with unruffled mien;
An apron underneath a flowing skirt
Cannot belie the presence of a queen.
Against the commonplace of circumstance
She moves with pride, serenely set apart,
Who challenges the world with gallant glance,

Heliotrope

Summer is made for thankfulness—not all
The glory gathers at the rustling feet
Of autumn; even now there is a sweet
Fulfillment on the land—joy in the call.
Of crickets, and a solace in the fall.
Of dew at dusk; bright spears of ripening wheat
Lean in the wind, and the tumultuous beat
Of life enfolds the green earth like a shawl!

And I am thankful for a certain bed
Of heliotrope that blesses day and dark.
Breathing its redolence upon the air
With unconcern—thus is my spirit fed
Abundantly, and, like the meadow lark,

Dance at West Point To Attract D. C. Girls

Younger Members of Service Set Now Preparing for 'Camp Illumination' Costume Ball There Next Saturday

By Elizabeth Henney

CONGRESS MAY COME and Congress may go, but the Capital's "service set" stays on forever. At least it seems that way when the Army, Navy and Marine Corps continue to make social news when everybody else seems either to be out of town, or on the way.

At the moment several younger members of the service contingent are concentrating on a very unusual coming event, "Camp Illumination," which will take place at West Point and will draw a number of the prettiest and most vivacious girls from both the Army and Navy set in Washington. Around the country club swimming pools, on the golf course, and between tennis sets, there are deep discussions about what to wear to this most important party of the service year.

The affair, which will be held at the end of the summer camp at West Point, is an historic event at the Military Academy.

Its origin was a celebration at West Point to honor the birth of the Dauphin of France, son of King Louis XVI, in October, 1781. At that memorable first affair, the whole American Army was encamped on the Plains of West Point.

First Official Event Of New Nation

George Washington and the Marquis de LaFayette worked out with great care the customs and etiquette to be observed at this first official party of the new American Nation, and many precedents they set are the basis of present social and official customs.

A huge temple of 118 tree-trunk columns was improvised on the plain and was fancifully decorated with branches. The Commander in Chief and a host of notables attended the event, and many toasts were given. At the conclusion of the drinking of each formal toast a salute of 13 guns was fired. The day was finished with a great display of fireworks and a formal ball.

With slight variations that same pattern of entertainment is followed each year at the West Point "Camp Illumination." Always held in August, this year on the twelfth of the month, the affair signifies the end of summer camp for the cadets. On that day the tents, which have been their summer home, are gaily decorated, a large pavilion is built and a brilliant costume dance is held.

This Year's Party Is 'Hollywood Preview'

This year it is entitled "Hollywood Preview," and six movie titles, "Rio Rita," "Dead End," "Dodge City," "College Swing," "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Hurricane," were selected as suggestions for costumes. Members of each two companies of cadets costume themselves after one of the movies listed and the result on the dance floor will undoubtedly be well worth viewing.

Next week trains and roads will be doing a rushing business in the direction of West Point. Among those heading that direction are Miss Marjorie Wallington, daughter of Lieut. Col. Edward C. Wallington; Miss Margaret Wallace, daughter of Mrs. John Hobart Wallace and the late Col. Wallace; Miss Meta Kingsley, Miss Carol Fries, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries; Miss Betty Myers and Miss Jacqueline Jones.

Also Miss Matile Griswold, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Oscar Griswold; Miss Betty Carney, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Robert B. Carney; Miss Virginia MacNabb, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Alexander B. MacNabb, of Fort Belvoir, Va.; Miss Alene Whorton, Miss Betty Bailey, Miss Lucia Kelsoe, Miss Edith Fitch and many, many more.

Polish Students To Visit D. C.

The Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, who is on his way back to Washington, is expected to be in town Tuesday to help entertain a group of Polish University students and teachers at an informal reception at the Shoreham.

About 25 persons are in the group, on a study of American University life. The company arrived in New York recently on board the Polish ship Batory, and will come to Washington tomorrow or the next day.

A representative group of students from Catholic, Georgetown and George Washington Universities have been invited to the reception by Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy, who is in charge of the affair.

In keeping with the season, the party will be very informal, and there will be no receiving line. However, members of the Embassy staff and of Polish societies in Washington will be on hand to greet the visitors.

John Slear Heads N. Carolina Group

The North Carolina Secretaries' Society has elected John K. Slear, secretary to Representative Bulwinkle, to succeed Laurie Hardin as its president.

Butts, jr., secretary to Representative Kerr, treasurer; Miss Mary Hoke, from the staff of Senator Reynolds, secretary; Laurie Hardin, secretary to Representative Weaver, sergeant at arms.

Members of the steering committee will have Miss Jane Pratt, secretary to Representative Burgin, as chairman. Others serving on the committee are Miss Johnnie Mabry, from the staff of Representative Doughton; Miss Catherine Harding, from the office of Representative Warren, and Wesley McDonald, secretary to Senator Reynolds.

Special guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Hervey Lupton, bride of the newly elected second vice president, and Mrs. Nina Goodwin, former member of the group, who is spending a month in Washington.

Costume Jewelry Requires Art In Wearing

Hollywood, Calif.—Bette Davis, whom American designers recently voted one of the country's best-dressed women, considers costume jewelry a never-to-be-taken-lightly part of every woman's wardrobe. She wears it all hours of the day, has Hollywood's largest collection, and designs much of it herself during doodling moments.

With active sports togs Bette likes "nature" pieces, such as a lei and bracelet of pikaki shells from the beach of Waikiki, a necklace of eucalyptus buds, lacquered coral and lime, an iridescent pine cone chatelaine, lobster clips, hand-carved wooden puppy pins, and a bracelet of rough gold nuggets.

Since most spectator sports clothes are patterned with high necks and short sleeves this season, bracelets score in Bette's accompanying jewel box. One of giant gold links has a tag bearing her social security number. A wide one set with amethysts gives added fillip to a light blue dress. A hoop carved of highly polished mahogany is worn on the same wrist as a gold chain having pear-shaped pendants set with moonstones.

Miss Helen Wright And H. W. Rutland Are Married

The marriage of Miss Helen Clarice Wright and Henry Woodrow Rutland took place on Thursday evening at 6 o'clock in the Metropolitan Baptist Church with the Rev. Robert Savage officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde D. Wright.

Gowned in a light blue chiffon frock, of an informal style, the bride wore a corsage of gardenias, and matching accessories.

Family Album Idea in Hats

New York (AP).—Sally Victor, just back from a visit to Parisian salons, has designed a whole collection of "family album hats." What they do with plumes, feathers and snoods is likely to give you a style start. But they all have been streamlined to fit 1939-1940.

Most of them are made of felt, occasionally faced with very furry beaver of a contrasting hue. (A few are made entirely of beaver.) The majority are in sober, muted shades—grayed or olive green, dull rosy wine, blackberry wine or beaver brown or stone blue. Exception appears in a vivid red which sometimes colors whole hats, again is used as a staccato splash on one of the many black hats which are shown.

Mary Grigsby Is Married to Mr. Lansdowne

Wedding Held in St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, Mass.

Of interest to Washington was the marriage of Miss Mary Agnes Grigsby and Ensign Falkland MacKinnon Lansdowne, which took place yesterday at S. John's Episcopal Church in Veverly Farms, Mass.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Fenton Grigsby, of Carmel, Calif. Ensign Lansdown is the stepson of Mrs. John Caswell, of Washington. He is the son of the late Lieut. Comdr. Zachary Lansdowne, U. S. N.

Wearing a leaf-green chiffon, Mrs. Arthur Smiley, jr., of Pacific Grove, Calif., was matron of honor. Her gown, made over taffeta, had a tight casque and short puffed sleeves. She wore a large horsehair hat and carried an old-fashioned bouquet with white and green pleated frills.

Miss Peggy Lansdowne, of Washington, daughter of Mrs. Caswell and half-sister of the bridegroom, was a bridesmaid. Also attending was Miss Julie Jenkins, of Washington. They wore white chiffon gowns made over taffeta, tied with leaf green sashes. Green streamers fell from their white horsehair hats and they carried nosegays with white and green paper frills.

John S. Baylis, jr., was best man. Ushers were Ensign H. B. Reece, Ensign W. B. Brinckloe, Ensign J. A. Obermeyer and Lieut. (J. G.) F. G. Springer, U. S. N.

Caswells Are Hosts At Reception

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell entertained at a reception at their summer home at Prides Crossing, Mass., which they have leased for the season. Mrs. Grigsby wore a white lace gown with a large white horsehair hat trimmed in green and a green orchid.

When the young couple left for their wedding trip to New Hampshire, the bride wore a beige ensemble with white accessories and cluster of white orchids. They will live at 14 Mayflower road, Arlmont Village, Arlington, Mass.

The bride attended Scripps College, California School of Fine Arts, the University of California and the University of Mexico.

Mary Haworth's Mail

His Life Made Miserable by Fiancee's Fickle, Unfathomable Moods, Man Asks What to Do

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When I was a midshipman at the Naval Academy, faithfully reading your column, it never occurred to me that one day I should write to you for advice . . . True, there are columnists such as yourself in the (censored) newspapers, but I read them with the same interest I read the comics. But as I recall, "no punches are pulled" when you give the answers . . .

I met Babs over six months ago. Up to that time, since leaving the Naval Academy nine months previous, I had no interest in anything. The great disappointment at having failed at the Academy left me pessimistic and without ambition. I had returned to school but had no interest in my work. I was headed for another failure. Before I met Babs, I had at least one date a week, but no one girl held my attention.

After the first date with Babs, others followed until finally I was seeing her three nights a week. In April she gave me a signet ring for my birthday. Three weeks later I gave her a ring with her birthstone and at the same time asked her to accept my class crest, with the usual understanding—i. e., that it was a preliminary to an engagement ring when financial conditions would permit me to offer marriage. She was agreeable.

Until six weeks ago, the world was Paradise to me. I finished my school year with great success, completing more work than I had planned and standing in the upper third of my class. Then six weeks ago her attitude changed. Instead of being affectionate she turned platonic. She kissed me goodnight as if it were a duty. Part of the time she ignored my existence and the rest of the time seemed to resent it. There was little opportunity to talk things over, for no sooner did we leave some place than she claimed to be tired, whereupon I took her home and departed.

Finally I pinned her down. Did she love me? She didn't know. Did she resent my presence? No. Did she still want to go out with me? Yes. Had I done anything to change her feelings? No. Then I told her I was being treated as though she disliked me, and with no explanation. Surely, I said, if something was wrong, she could be frank about it, and ask me to trust her while she was trying to figure things out in her own mind. At this point she became resentful of the whole conversation and began to cry. I left.

Later she confided her side to a family doctor with whom I am acquainted. He called me in and asked me what was wrong. I told him what I knew. He advised patience and said all would be well. He talked to her again and called her down. However, he could give no explanation as to why she had changed. Her mother seemed to sense that something was wrong. But when I attempted to talk with her, she cut me short with the implication that it was our problem.

A week ago I talked with Babs again, asking her how long this was to last. I hinted that my patience had a limit. She was resentful and reminded me of an earlier warning—i. e., that she would be like this; that she always hurt persons she liked. But a change occurred. We drove out of town to a week-end party and she was civil, congenial and fun. She actually made conversation instead of brooding silently. She was attentive and seemed like old times. However, her attitude was still platonic. These are the facts as nearly as I can tell them . . .

I love Babs with all my heart, and would do anything to bring back the days of six weeks ago. I could stop seeing her, but I won't, unless she tells me to. I could call her down; but despite the fact that she has hurt me, I could not hurt her. If I could hate her the difficulty would be solved, but I couldn't if I tried. She leaves on her vacation late in August. Perhaps a separation will be good for us both. But I should like some encouragement from her before she leaves, to stave off the jealousy I shall certainly suffer.

My appeal to you is this: What is there to do? Can you explain her attitude? Am I through? Please help me somehow. I must get back some of the pride I have lost. Thanks a million for your consideration, and good luck to you in your work. Yours truly,

BEWILDERED.

'Demon Lover' Tactics Held Advisable

DEAR BEWILDERED: You are dealing, I think, with a spoiled darling who is long overdue for repayment in her own coin. So she warned you in the beginning that she "would be like this?" That she "always hurt persons she liked?" There spoke a brat; a vain, selfish, petty, cocksure young egotist—given to moods because she has herself too much on her mind; because others, captivated by her superficial charm (when she chooses to turn it on), have been too generous about indulging her very bad manners; and because it has become a game with her to find out just how much she can get away with.

Observe how quickly she trimmed her sails on that occasion when you hinted that your patience had a limit. In the twinkling of an eye, "a change occurred. She actually made conversation instead of brooding silently. She was attentive and seemed like old times." Why? Because the chill wind of fear of losing the whip hand in the relationship had blown over her. Because good old easy-going, long-suffering You had actually shown some signs of fight, of resistance, of self-respect, of being Fed Up.

"However (you report), her attitude was still platonic." Again, why? Because it isn't in her nature to refrain from playing a cat-and-mouse game with you until she has to. Consciously or unconsciously (now that she thinks she has you hooked) she is testing your masculine capacity for mastery. She is risking the whole relationship in an effort to discover just how tough-fibered you are. CAN you take her or leave her? If you can't, she cannot respect you; and neither can she love you or ever be sure she does. The more she finds she can make you suffer—with pallid, patient despair—the less she respects you, and the less she is inclined to yield to your none-too-manly (in her opinion) embraces.

Take a tip from an article, "Demon Lover," by Katharine Simonds, published in the July 29 issue of the Saturday Review of Literature. What kind of man is it that such women lose their heads and rend their garments over? Not a man of your meekly devoted caliber. Ah, no. Let Miss Simonds describe him. "He is tall, he is dark, he is strange. He is proud and aloof; often he has a secret; he is graceful, self-assured, quick-witted; physically powerful, impatient, dynamic, and often dangerous and cruel. . . ."

"Why," asks Miss Simonds, "is the American wife, as seen in the novels she reads, in revolt against the American husband? . . . Never was man so virtuous as the typical American husband. He is hard working, kind, affectionate, anxious to please; he is steady, generous and sober; he shaves and washes and brushes his teeth regularly. And, seeing all this, and finding no mystery anywhere about him, she longs for the demon lover, who abides none of her questioning, and certainly none of her influencing."

The thing for you to do is to hurl this lady's foot off your neck with one mighty heave—by striking the attitude, all of a sudden and without explanation, that the state of her emotions and the nature of her intentions are of little concern to you; that you will be seeing her when she wants to see you, and that it is up to her to give the signal.

If she pulls a long face when out with you, take her home without a moment's unnecessary delay. Stop apologizing for offenses you haven't committed and don't try to cajole or to appease her into a cheerful or tender mood. Show her that you, too, can be "proud and aloof," disturbingly self-sufficient, possessed of strange overtones of personality of the "demon lover" variety.

Go to Town in This New Black Crepe

Novelty Table Setting Urged For Summer Fun

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

YOU SHOULD be tush-tushed very properly if you've been slapping the same old dishes and linen on the table day in and day out with never an adventure into something original in the way of setting. If only to vary the monotony of the daily routine, try a novelty table setting once a week or so. This is especially fun in the summertime when informal tables are the thing and practically anything goes as far as accessories are concerned. Here are some ideas, in case you don't know where to begin:

TEA FOR TWO—An all-over sprigged tea-set of Spode, the sheerest of white linen napkins, turquoise cake and sandwich plates, and yourself in a cool and flowery summer dress.

VACATION SUPPER—A dark blue tablecloth and either plain white plates or bright peasant pottery plates. For the centerpiece, have a small steamship, a canoe, a sailing ship model, a toy electric train, or an airplane model—according to what kind of a vacation you're celebrating.

SUNDAY DINNER IN THE COUNTRY—A plain green tablecloth set with pottery plates in vegetable or fruit design. Arrange a centerpiece with a flat basket holding cut geraniums or heaped with garden vegetables, simple homely things like cabbages, string beans, onions and eggplant.

BEFORE THE GAME—Cover the table in a large white piece of paper and draw on this a map in bright colors showing your local golf course, tennis club, or some other rendezvous for sport in the neighborhood.

Corseted Figure For Winter

Paris (AP).—The corset has clamped down on Paris fashions today and tightened up the silhouette from bust to hips to create a "stem torso."

Winter frocks shown in the new collections have bodices adjusted to rigid, old-fashioned stays revived in the new 1939 manner.

Shades of late Victorians are evoked in the bustle-back fashion for day and evening. Day coats are "bustled" with fur bows and bandings. Wool frocks have short "tails" of pleatings hung from back waistbands.

Evening dresses feature big cuffs on skirt backs, some lighted up with bright-colored flowers.

New corseting for the "stem torso" was introduced by Mainbocher, whose silhouette featured also the tight waist and rounded hips. Tailored drapery was a new note in coats and suits, often taking the form of fine pleatings across the bust and hips.

A Woman's New York

Mrs. Drudge Loses to Mrs. Modern 40 Times Daily in Dishwashing Contest at Fair.

New York, Aug. 4.

FORTY TIMES a day, out at our Fair, a fixed sporting event is run off. At the Westinghouse exhibit this impossible race is staged. The contestants are Mrs. Drudge, the lady who washes her dinner dishes in the poky, old-fashioned way, and Mrs. Modern, who uses one of the company's new fangled electric gadgets. Need I add that Poor Mrs. Drudge hasn't won yet—never will? Her only solace is a life-like performance of kitchen misery—and, of course, the weekly pay check.

ALICE HUGHES

This is some show, when you break it down. No less than eight pretty girls play these two roles, in shifts, and all are actresses. Some of them hadn't washed a dish since they were kids, until Art called them to the fixed race at the Fair. Lucille Sears, a local girl, said she had never washed crockery, even at home, and Leslie Congdon, of Philadelphia and Hazel Kempt, of Cleveland, never touch a dish outside of business hours. Of course, two of the octette are married, and plunge their hands into dishwater in line of domestic duty.

This is a very realistic show, designed to turn every woman present into a happy Mrs. Modern. Four men are always on duty backstage dirtying up the dishes to be washed, of which 12 sets are always on hand. The boys use up ten cups of lard, nearly four quarts of egg yolks, and many other things necessary to messing up the family china. Then, to make it tougher, the soiled dishes are baked in a dryer, so that the mess becomes almost a part of the pottery.

Mrs. Modern's electric machine takes about eight and a half minutes to do the job, while she reads a tasty bit of fiction, but poor Mrs. Drudge gets only a little more than half-way through her chore when the whistle blows. A sad sight, I cried. And the poor girls are getting their hands ruined by the dish-water. But it's a fine show, even though your heart bleeds for Mrs. Drudge.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Wonder if it is true that Helen Wills is going to marry the polo-playing Aidan Roark the middle of this month? Local reporters have been practically stating it as a fait accomopli. Two years ago the Grecian Wills divorced her first, Mr. Moody, at Reno. Anyhow, the stories are that he is giving up horse-croquet, and that she is going to stop winning the national championship, though she may swing a racket at times. A writer and a water-color artist, Helen now seems to want to be a painter more than anything else. I don't think Poker-Face has ever been a greatly beloved champion—but she certainly has been admired as a work of art.

Renee Carroll, the flame-haired hat check girl at Sardi's, the noted Times Square theatrical restaurant, is acting again—playing in a revue at an upstate summer resort. Renee is a Broadway institution, and knows more about the quaint angles of skimmer-checking than anyone alive.

DOC DAFOE, the quints doctor, went out to the Fair the other day and posed for pictures with a set of triplets and of twins, all working in the same milk exhibit and all very pretty. We couldn't produce five of a kind, for Dafoe has that monopoly. But he enjoyed himself, being anything but allergic to pretty lasses.

Miriam Hopkins, the Gawgia Blonde, came in for a visit to the town and a peek at the Fair, which she will probably call Hollywood without palms." I don't think Prince Michael, her adopted son, came along.

One of the biggest girl shows at the fair is NTG's "Congress of Beauty," and visitors have always been struck by the beauty of the usherettes—mostly prettier than the undressed darlings on the stage. The truth is that the girls, who ush there shrugged off the undraped job of chorus girls, and preferred to show customers to seats.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT, the niece of Eleanor I, must have something on the ball besides an easily publicized name. For she has just designed a new series of prints for a big Fifth Avenue store—the ones she did earlier having caught on. Her new collection includes sport dresses, daytime dresses, shirt and skirt sets, and house dresses. Nice going, Nell!

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Exercise Is Tricky, It May Cut Weight—And It May Not!

EXERCISE is the modern miracle worker and no girl can be streamlined without it. But exercise is tricky. It may act as an appetizer and cause you to take on weight you do not want, or it may cause you to lose a few pounds you really need.

Something of the kind happened when a picture with Rosalind Russell and Ann Morriss was being filmed. In the role of an instructor, Miss Morriss put Miss Russell through a set of reducing exercises. But, contrary to the script, she lost five pounds, while Miss Russell gained three!

In the final analysis, the effect of exercise on the weight is an indirect one. Miss Russell gained because she had a better appetite and took more food. The instructor lost either because she took too little food or because the nervous energy involved greatly increased her calorie expenditure—which adds up to the same thing!

Exercise Still Necessary

But, in spite of this roundabout influence of exercise on weight, it is necessary in any weight-normalizing program. A nourishing diet is wasted on the thin girl unless she can assimilate it, and daily exercise tends to improve digestion, assimilation and circulation. Under those conditions she cannot help gaining if she has the right diet.

Since exercise is not reducing, you overweights might feel you can forget about it. But the only way you can replace flabby, bulky fat with firm, compact tissue is through an exercise program. In fact, if you want to look 10 pounds lighter without losing a pound, go in for exercise! Exercise will not only trim inches off your measurements, but it will make you feel infinitely better. If you "feel old," the probability is that you have never made a practice of getting enough exercise to whip up your circulation and interest in living. A sedentary life is conducive to vegetation and thick waistlines!

Start Off Gradually

When you begin to take an active interest in exercise, however, take it easy. You can't leap from your armchair into a fast game of tennis or into championship swimming. You will have to get used to exercise before you can put yourself to any test. If you overdo, you will feel worse. It would be better to start with just five minutes of mild exercise a day and gradually work up to 30 or 45 minutes of vigorous exercise. If you start off with 45 minutes, the first day will probably be the last. Besides, there's no point in trying to hurry; exercise works its miracles fairly slowly. Don't expect changes in less than a week.

Along with your exercise, keep close tab on the calories. In order to gain, you must take more calories than you can spend in energy. If you are to lose, exercise your will power to keep from taking as many calories as you spend.

How to Prevent Crystals in Jelly

Even the experts sometimes have trouble in one phase of jelly-making—cream of tartar crystals sometimes form. To prevent this, store the juice over night in a jar in a cold place. The next morning dip the juice out. This will leave the sediment and crystals sticking to the bottom and sides of the jar. Strain and make up into jelly.

A perfect glass of jelly holds its shape when unmolded onto a dish, but will quiver slightly when the dish is moved. And it should be so tender that it will break apart evenly when cut with a spoon.

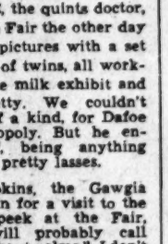
Fashion Art Self-Taught

ART IS A glamorous career. Looking at pictures by those who have arrived, seeing the graceful fashion figures in newspapers and magazines, you may think it is all out of your reach.



Actually, many successful artists learned at home. They, too, had to contend with the skeptical smiles that are given the beginner. And how quickly those skeptical smiles turn to admiration, to boasts of "I knew her when" once the young artist wins success, gets real money for her work.

So realize that the field of fashion art is open to you, too. With charts showing you figure proportions, with clear explanations of the principles of drawing, you can teach yourself.

A simple way to learn the principle of balance is shown in our diagram. When you are planning a pose think of the body and limbs as if they were blocks. You see how you must balance your blocks to keep them from falling. Balance your figure in the same way.

Figure proportions you learn from charts based on the famous Da Vinci rules. For instance, the upright figure is a little more than seven times the length of the head. The shoulders, front view, are two "heads" wide.

Such proportions you adapt easily to your fashion figures. And when you know the professional way to draw fabrics, it is simple to "clothe" figures in smart costumes.

Our 40-page booklet "Home Course In Fashion Art, gives you easy-to-follow instructions in fashion drawing. Has 138 illustrations, including charts based on the Da Vinci rules of figure proportion. Explains blocking in, light and shade, wash, rendering of textiles, furs. Shows how to do work that's salable to newspapers, magazines, advertising agencies.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

'All Quiet Along The Potomac'

The boat glided away from the pier and the hot clangorous city began to recede, the Monument becoming slimmer and slimmer against the gray-blue horizon.

She would be back by 8 o'clock she calculated, and she would dash right out to the Proser's—now why on earth had she ever promised them? Especially when she had such a hard day ahead at the office . . . and had she given Mr. Flint that report? . . . No! And she had forgotten to call old Martinet and he'd be simply furious! Well, there were so many things to remember. And then Miss Chirp making that dumb mistake . . . and the telephone operator getting that call balled up. And then all the things to do tomorrow . . . .

The city's skyline was getting fainter and grayer. The late afternoon sun was casting a glimmering sheaf of silver across the smooth sheets of slate colored water. A cooler breeze was circling gently about her face. Did she detect in it a whiff of the wide spaces of the Atlantic?

She leaned back in her deck chair and listened to the lulling swish of water about the stern of the boat. How small the Monument was getting! She thought of the office. It, too, seemed smaller—a miniature playhouse with pigmies moving about. Mr. Flint, old Martinet, Miss Chirp—why, they were no bigger than marionettes.

The green wooded hills of the Virginia side moved serenely past. Old homesteads stood tranquilly on velvety knolls. She imagined the barons of Virginia in them leading their quiet contemplative lives . . sitting on their verandas and gazing across the river . . . riding horseback along quiet country roads into Alexandria . . . coming down to their river landings to board boats for Washington.

The white pillars of Mount Vernon gleamed above the dark foliage. How quiet, how eternally tranquil it all was. She glanced backward toward the city. It was aeons distant. She thought of the office. It was a mere speck.

The sun had become a red ball, its silvery streak turned to flame color, as the boat reached its destination. Ahead stretched the widening waters of the Potomac.

Beyond that misty gray horizon, she visoned the sweeps of the Atlantic. Momentarily she felt an orderly part of that far-flung mysterious world.

Through the dusk the boat plowed homeward. The sun had gone, leaving in its wake a bank of rose-colored clouds behind the Maryland shores. They vanished and the gray river merged into the gray haze of the land. A soft restful gray universe. How far away the city, the world, headlines, dictators, rumors of wars, tomorrow's petty duties!

The pale moon in the southeast became yellow and dropped a shaft of light on the water. The forests on the shore became dark and brooding. The banks began to draw together. And then—the red gleam on the top of the monument, the flickering lights in the dark gray mist that was the city. Now the golden dome of the Capitol.

The boat circled in toward the pier. The drifting sounds of band music from an excursion party, the hum of voices, the clatter of the wharves, and beyond the muffled tumult of the city.

She cast a last glance down the misty expanse of the river and rose to leave the boat. She would call the Prosers' and tell them she could not come tonight. They might not like it but then—well that seemed so unimportant. And now then tomorrow—oh well why think of that? Tomorrow was yet another day.

Today's Health Talk

Exercise Increases Rate and Force of Heart Contraction; Aids Appetite; Improves Muscles

Exercise is par excellence the hygienic opportunity of summer. Its effects are observable on the circulation, the digestion, on the functions of elimination and on respiration.

Exercise increases the rate and force of the heart contraction. Exercises of speed increase the pulse rate and step up the output of the heart. McCurdy found that after a fast 100-yard dash the output was increased 37 per cent; after a quarter-mile it was increased 86 per cent. Exercises of strength, such as weight lifting, do not increase the pulse rate, but do increase the output. Exercises of endurance have an effect somewhere in between the other two—they increase the rate somewhat, but less than exercises of speed.

The composition of the blood is somewhat changed after exercise. There is a slight swing toward acidity, a decrease in the bicarbonate of the plasma. But this is very transitory and really is probably a beneficial chemical result. The cause is that lactic acid is formed when a muscle contracts.

Pressure Raised

Blood pressure is raised moderately by exercise, but there is a rapid return to normal. The total effect is beneficial.

On digestion the chief effect is to increase the appetite. Abdominal exercise increases the movement of the food through the intestines by a massage as the muscles contract and relax. The increased supply of oxygen to the brain during exercise is also helpful to the glands which secrete the digestive juices.

Elimination is increased by exercise by its effect on the circulation and the respiration. Water and salts are eliminated by the skin. The lungs eliminate gases under exercise. After a strenuous game of tennis, football or polo, it is quite possible that the athlete will be ten pounds lighter.

There is a superstition among baseball players and in similar sports that no water should be swallowed during a game or match. All the physiological evidence we have acquired points the other way. It might be that a player could drink enough to slow him down, but it is not likely, and the theatrical garglings and spittings that are noted so often in the limelight are unnecessary.

Muscle Efficiency

Efficiency of the muscles is unquestionably the most notable result of exercise. Teamwork between the muscles and nerves is promoted. It is really one of the most marvelous phenomena in nature to see how beautifully adapted to their functions muscles can become by training.

As a result of muscular activity, all the functions of the body respond. As soon as exercise begins, the carbonic output is increased and when concentration in the blood reaches the respiratory center, there is an SOS for more oxygen. The heart beats faster, the diaphragm works harder and faster, and the entire body is keyed up to a higher pitch.

"Second wind" is simply an adjustment of these new chemical changes.

Sleep is affected by exercise in two ways. If the exercise be moderate and proper, sleep is induced. But it is certainly true that one can be "too tired to sleep." The heart may be so disturbed by exercise that you lie awake and listen to the shaking of the bed.

The immediate effect of exercise on the muscles is to increase the temperature and the size. The ultimate effect is hypertrophy, or increase, both in the gross size and in the size of the individual fibers.

It's Cool in the Country

There's no reason why you should swelter in the city's heat when there are so many cool spots within easy driving distance of Washington. And there's no reason why you should let your old, worn-out car keep you at home when late-model used cars are priced so low. Turn to the classified section of today's Post. You'll find a wide selection of the best buys in the used car market . . . one of which is just the car you want. Pick one out and start enjoying life.

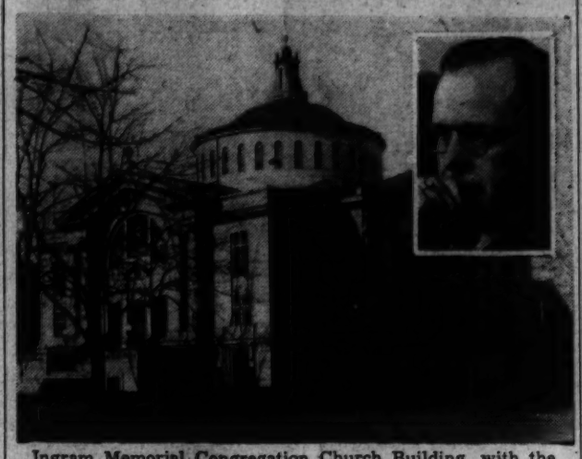
Ingram Church Edifice Stands As Parents' Memorial to a Son



Ingram Memorial Congregation Church Building, with the Rev. Walter C. Hook, pastor, in inset

O. H. Ingrams in 1910 Donated $50,000 For Building With Swimming Pool, Gym, And Bowling Alleys for Young People

A unique origin is boasted by the Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, Tenth and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

In 1910, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Ingram, long friends of the congregation, wishing to erect an appropriate memorial to a departed son, donated $50,000—later an additional $15,000—to the organization, then worshiping in a small hall on Pennsylvania avenue.

The gift stipulated that it was to be used for construction of a church edifice containing recreational facilities for young people, including a swimming pool, bowling alleys, gymnasium, showers and other features. A smoking room, with popracks, was used at one time.

According to the Rev. Walter C. Hook, present pastor, the gym and alleys are not being used during the summer, but probably will be overhauled for fall and winter. It is hoped that during the coming fall and winter two nights weekly can be devoted to recreational and social programs for girls and two for boys.

The present institutional board is headed by Lloyd Mockatee, of 628 East Capitol street, also president of the Youth Forum. Scouting, always a live activity at the church, is under the leadership of C. Richard Callison, scoutmaster, of 1400 Twenty-ninth street southeast. The boys meet Fridays.

Women's work at Ingram Memorial Church revolves around the Women's Guild, led by Mrs. Henry T. Richards, and consists of money-raising projects for the church, such as dinners. The ladies also sew for the needy, and make surgeons' pads for hospitals. Clothing is sent to Southern mission schools.

The church has a religious education unit which has an enrollment of 200 students, work being conducted under the superintendency of Clifford R. Armhold, of 1639 West Virginia avenue northeast. Miss Virginia Daiker serves as chairman of the church music committee.

The church has several active Bible classes, whose members play an important role in the work of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association and other city-wide religious programs. Mrs. Emil Kaiser is president of the O. H. Ingram class and Mrs. Henry T. Richards is teacher. The young married couples' class is taught by Robert T. Hollinger and Morrell MacKinsey is president.

Among other leaders of the church are Franklin J. Richards, church clerk; Charles H. Stephenson, treasurer; Gordon B. Logwood, financial secretary; George H. Smith, president of the board of deacons; J. Herman Cutting, president of the board of trustees; Robert T. Hollinger, chairman of the finance committee; William S. Smith, chief usher, and Mrs. Wallace T. Conn, chairman of the missionary committee. H. R. Miller serves building manager and VVictotr H. Neal as organist-choirmaster.

"MY COUNTRY, 'TIS OF THEE"
Samuel F. Smith

"My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing:
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring!"

The national anthem of our country was written in 1832 by the Rev. Samuel Francis Smith while a student in Andover Theological Seminary. It was first sung at a Fourth of July celebration for children in Boston. The Rev. Mr. Smith was born in Boston and was graduated from Harvard in 1829, in the class with Dr. Wendell Holmes.

Committee Head Deplores President's Vetoing of Three Bills for District

By James D. Secrest.

A bill to increase the local tax on gasoline 1 cent will be introduced by Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee in an effort to solve the Federal-District fiscal relations problem, he said yesterday.

At the same time he made a mild protest against the veto of three local bills which originated in the House as President Roosevelt vetoed the fourth District measure within a week.

Earlier the President signed two minor District bills to authorize the exchange of minor park lands at Mount Olivet road and along Piney Branch parkway.

The fourth veto was attached to a measure, which originated in the Senate, to relieve the American Friends Service Committee from realty taxation. This veto was recommended by the District Commissioners.

Protest in Record

Randolph's protest to three previous vetoes were made in an extension of remarks placed in the Congressional Record.

He stated that he noted "with sincere regret" that the President had vetoed bills to put firemen on a 5-day week, to allow the Commissioners to settle claims and suits they institute, and to prohibit brewers to sell beer to retailers on credit.

"Each of these bills received a full, fair and impartial consideration in your committee for the District of Columbia," he said, "and in the conviction that they were of a beneficial nature for local government, all three were favorably reported with a recommendation that they pass."

Randolph cited the wage-hour law and the 39-hour week for Government employes as precedents for the 60-hour week for firemen and added that the District Committee considered this "reasonable."

President Roosevelt in his veto message, however, based the veto on the fact that the 5-day week would create a local revenue deficit.

Regarding the authority to settle claims, Randolph said the committee assumed that the Commissioners would guard the interests of the District in all settlements and that the legislation would expedite the handling of claims and avoid expensive litigation.

Hard to Understand

"Moreover," he added, "the plan of reorganization for the government of the District specifically provides for such an item, and in this light the veto of the bill is difficult to understand."

The beer credit bill, he stated, was not intended to make the government a collection agency, as the veto message implied, "but rather that the conduct of this business affected as it is with a public interest, should be adequately safeguarded to the extent that only financially responsible retailers should serve the public with a commodity, the distribution of which might possibly be open to abuse through extension of excessive credit."

He added that other States have similar laws so that no precedent would have been established.

"Throughout the entire session," he concluded, "the District Committee has devoted its utmost in time and energy to the formulation and advocacy of reasonable laws for the District, whose legislative welfare is committed to its care.

"It is disappointing, therefore, that its efforts should be negated by Presidential vetoes at the end of the session, particularly marked by an unusual struggle for the enactment of District of Columbia legislation."

President Roosevelt, in vetoing the bill to exempt property of the American Friends Service Committee from taxation, cited the objections of the Commissioners.

Theory of Exemptions

"The basic theory upon which exemption from taxation is granted certain institutions," the message stated, "is that the exempted institutions perform work which might otherwise have to be carried on by the Government at the expense of the taxpayers and conversely that the exemption of such institutions contributes to the continuance of their work, therefore materially lessening the burden upon the taxpayers."

In the case of the American Friends, the message added, the exemption of the property would increase the local tax burden since the occupation of the service house by students "does not in any sense relieve the local government of any definable public burden."

Randolph's statement regarding the 1-cent gasoline tax predicted that the jump from 2 to 3 cents would raise an additional $1,338,429, but it did not explain how this would ease the general tax burden as gas taxes and other levies are kept strictly separate.

District officials were quick to point out that the present gas tax already raises sufficient revenue for highway needs and that under the tax act the District cannot divert any of this levy to the general revenue fund.

Revisions Sent to House

The Senate late last night adopted House amendments to two District bills, but made minor revisions which will require House approval today if the measures are to go to the White House.

One of the measures, giving the Commissioners authority to buy additional parking meters, has been rewritten to direct the District heads to buy additional parking meters on the same basis as the former ones were bought, but with a permissive provision to buy half of them of the manually operated type.

The second bill, which broadens the real estate regulation act to include "chance" salesmen, was amended by the House to exempt cemetery salesmen and to be retroactive to July 1. To clear a minor clerical error, this bill will have to be passed by the House a second time.

R. M. Brennan To Do Buying For District

Named to Succeed Marion Hargrove, Retiring December 1

Roland M. Brennan, veteran of 27 years with the District government and former secretary to the Board of Commissioners, yesterday was named purchasing officer by the Commissioners.

BRENNAN

He will assume his new duties on December 1, when Marion C. Hargrove, present purchasing officer, is due to retire.

Hargrove, a veteran in the municipal service himself, holds the record for his length of service with the local government. He tops Commissioner Hazen, who recently celebrated his fiftieth anniversary, by two years.

Brennan entered the municipal service in 1910 as a clerk in the trees and parks division. Later he spent some time in the sewer division, water department and administrative offices.

In 1925 he was promoted to chief clerk of the engineer department, and ten years later was named secretary to the Board of Commissioners, succeeding the late Daniel E. Garges.

Brennan, who lives at 1023 Varnum street northeast, is 47 years old. His new job carries a salary grade of from $4,600 to $5,400 a year.

Hargrove reached the retirement age last November but was voted a year's extension.

Housing Census Passed

The House yesterday passed a Senate bill authorizing a national census of housing facilities at a cost not to exceed $8,000,000. The roll call vote was 190 to 144.

Navy Honors Irishmen With Ship 'O'Brien'

Named to Succeed Marion Hargrove, Retiring December 1

The Navy yesterday honored five Irish-American patriots of Revolutionary days for their part in winning the first American naval engagement ever fought.

Acting Secretary Edison announced that Miss Josephine O'Brien Campbell had been designated as sponsor for a new Navy destroyer, to be named the O'Brien, in honor of her great-great-great-grandfather and his four brothers. She will christen the vessel at the Boston Navy Yard, September 3.

The story of the five O'Brien boys and their feat of capturing a British man o' war at Machias, Me., in 1775, is not recorded in most history books, but is vouched for by official Navy records.

It seems that when news of Lexington reached the little seaport of Machias, the citizens erected a "liberty pole" in honor of the feat of the Massachusetts farmers. A British sloop-of-war put into port a few days later and the captain issued an ultimatum to the town-folk—cut the pole down or he would turn his guns on the village.

While the town fathers were in parley with the British, a lumber sloop commanded by Capt. Jeremiah O'Brien and with his four brothers—Gedeon, Joseph, John and William—and others aboard, drifted out in the harbor. Apparently badly handled, the craft struck the British warship, and instantly scores of hardy "Down Easters" were aboard armed with pitch-forks and axes.

The fight was soon over, with the Americans victorious. Six of the latter were killed and ten Englishmen. Navy records list it as the first naval engagement of the Revolution.

The account states that the youngest of the O'Briens, William, was only a boy of 16. Refused permission to go along, he stowed away, and when the fight started, he was in the thick of it. When the battle was over, young William O'Brien had so distinguished himself that he was presented with the British commander's sword.

Montgomery County Will Match Funds To Buy Land

The Senate yesterday restored to the third deficiency bill an appropriation of $150,000 for purchase of land along the Maryland side of the Potomac River between the District line and Great Falls in connection with development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Officials of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission told the Senate Appropriations sub-committee the cost of the land probably would rise if the appropriation was deferred until next year.

The $150,000 appropriation will match a similar outlay by Montgomery County, which was authorized by the Maryland Legislature to issue bonds.

The Senate did not alter the House appropriation of $257,766 for various District deficiences, nor did it restore the funds requested by the Administration to finance the President's promotion plan and training service program for Federal employes.

HudsonGrunewald Hurt in Crash

Hudson Grunewald, 38, of Silver Spring, Md., Sunday editor of the Evening Star, was in serious condition at Easton (Md.) Hospital last night after his automobile was in collision with a Pennsylvania Railroad train early yesterday. He suffered a fractured skull.

His mother-in-law, Mrs. Charles Berry, who was a passenger in the automobile, was less seriously hurt. Both were thrown from the car, which was dragged 25 feet.

1,100 in War Department Go To New Quarters Monday

Only Gen. Pershing Will Retain Office In State, War and Navy Building as Staff Moves to Munitions Structure

Eleven hundred War Department employes will begin work at the Munitions Building for the first time Monday when moving of Army headquarters from the State, War and Navy Building will be completed. The transfer will be the first made by ranking policy-making officials of the War Department in more than 50 years.

Immediately after Secretary of War Wooding left for Panama several days ago, files, furniture and pictures were removed from his office, which with others soon will be occupied by the "passionates anonymous," President Roosevelt's recently appointed assistants.

Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams, adjutant general of the Army, moved out ten days ago and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, are going today.

When the "moving day" is completed the only military officer to retain space in the old building will be Gen. John J. Pershing.

To make room for new occupants in the Munitions Building, employes of the office of the Surgeon General and the Chief of Finance have been quartered several blocks away in Corcoran Courts Apartments, which have been completely rebuilt to fit administrative requirements.

Congress has authorized construction of a new $26,000,000 War Department Building at Twenty-first and C streets northwest. Under a $3,000,000 appropriation, work is expected to be started soon on the first unit.

Two Ducks Run Afoul D. C. Law and Owners Ask Leniency

Miss Frances Washington Weeks, a native of Florida, came to Washington recently to work with the Farm Credit Administration. With her sister, she brought a home at 4964 Eskridge terrace northwest, which is across the street from the Francis Scott Key School, and yesterday the District Commissioners received a letter from the sisters:

"My sister and I started purchasing a house in the suburbs of the city with a view of enjoying a little country life while working for the Government. We bought two little ducks, building a wire enclosure for them. Watching them grow has been a great pleasure for us.

"The neighbors signed our application for a permit, having no objection to the ducks at all, as they are not noisy. Unfortunately we live across the street from a school having a very large garden and playgrounds. The regulations require a distance of 250 feet from ducks to school property."

Miss Weeks pointed out the commissioners recently let down the bars a bit for pigeon fanciers and for Eddie Bernstein, legless pencil vendor, who could not keep his pet monkey, Gypsy, under the dollar-a-day tax. She got a 30-day extension while her case is considered.

English Accent on Pennies

Last night Martin Bogey, 25, of Jamestown, N. Y., met a stranger in a bus station. This stranger, who spoke with an English acent, went with Bogey for a walk down Fifteenth street northwest, and there they met another man. The stranger suggested a whirl at matching pennies.

Bogey reported later to police he lost $4 and a $15 watch

Baptists Call On Rumanian Envoy Here

Dr. Rushbrooke Asks Full Freedom for His Denomination

A genial, white-bearded Englishman, who presides over an organization representing all the world's Baptists, politely but firmly requested the Rumanian Minister yesterday to remind Bucharest that better treatment of Baptists in that land is desired.

RUSHBROOKE

"It was a most successful conference," said the Rev. Dr. James Henry Rushbrooke, of London, president of the Baptist World Alliance, "at which Minister Irimescu was informed that we appreciate the liberal attitude of the government.

"However, we presented a resolution, adopted at the Sixth Baptist World Congress held at Atlanta last week, pointing out that the new decrees are still inadequate, and full religious freedom is wanted."

A nimble, smiling fellow whose parish is the entire globe, Dr. Rushbrooke, was installed as president of the alliance at the Atlanta congress on his sixty-ninth birthday, after nearly 20 years in its service. Since 1928 he had been its general secretary.

There were approximately 12,000 official delegates at the conclave, from 60 countries, which ended July 28. They are members of various conventions and unions whose aggregate membership is in excess of 12,000,000 communicants, not counting the Russians.

"We can only speculate on the number of Russian Baptists," said Dr. Rushbrooke, "but they must number into the hundreds of thousands, if not millions."

Accompanying him to the Rumanian legation yesterday were Dr. W. O. Lewis, of Paris, his successor as general secretary, and Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, of Washington, representing American Baptists.

The resolution which they gave to Minister Irimescu expressed gratitude at the reopening of churches which were closed by the government last year.

Minister Irimescu also was reminded of the difference between the demands made upon Rumanian Orthodox priests and Baptist clergymen with regard to military service.

Dr. Rushbrooke said he would leave Washington today for New York, sailing for home next Wednesday.

"After all," he laughed, "I must be thinking about my wife. We haven't seen each other since last May."

Doctors Get Bid to Join Hospital Plan

D. C. Medical Society Members Polled on Desire for Care in Case of Own Illness

Because doctors get sick, too, they have been invited to apply for membership in Group Hospitalization, Inc., it was learned yesterday.

Members of the District Medical Society are now being canvassed by mail as to their desire to enroll in the nonprofit-making hospitallzation plan, under which a member pays a fixed sum each month, entitling him to a certain number of days' hospital care each year.

250 Members Needed

If 250 members of the medical society say they wish to join, a group will be formed. If this happens, it will be the first all-professional group admitted into Group Hospitalization.

In fact, one of that agency's officials yesterday pointed out that the doctors would constitute the first unit whose members did not have a common employer. Heretofore it has been the practice to accept employe groups from Government offices, retail stores, industrial plants, etc.

Organization Five Years Old

Launched about five years ago as one of the first enterprises of its kind in the country, Group Hospitalization now has approximately 40,000 subscribers. Including members of subscribers' families, some 65,000 men, women and children are eligible for services.

No special rates will be set up for physicians if they join the plan, it was indicated. Dues are 65 cents per month for single persons, $1.50 for husband and wife and $1.75 for family coverage, regardless of its size.

August 20 has been set as the deadline for return of the quesionnaire sent to members of the medical society.

Woman Found On Flaming Bed Dies; Ruled Suicide

Severe burns caused the death of Mrs. Mae Pearson, 40, of 621 Twenty-third street northwest, early yesterday in Emergency Hospital. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. Pearson was brought to the hospital Thursday morning after her husband, Robert, found her on a flaming, oil-soaked bed.

Wednesday night Mrs. Pearson had brought her daughter Margaret, 13, to the Woman's Bureau. Capt. Rhoda Millikan said yesterday that Margaret still is in the Receiving Home, where she was placed at the time.

Mrs. Ruth Christopher, of the Public Welfare Board's child welfare division, said yesterday that the board is "investigating the advisability of committing Margaret's guardianship to the board."

Mrs. H. P. Jones Named Destroyer's Sponsor

Mrs. Jones, who lived in Washington for many years, now resides in Wyncote, Pa. The vessel is to be launched at the Charleston Navy Yard in December.

Bloodworth's Single Sends GelbertHome

Scores After Triple To Leftfield; Seven Double Plays Mark Exciting Battle

By Shirley Povich.

Before 10,000 ladies' day guests and customers, whipped into the most sustained dither of the year at Griffith Stadium by ten tense innings of baseball, the Nats yesterday expanded their winning streak to five games, taking a turbulent 6-to-5 contest from the White Sox.

Digging themselves out of a 4-to-1 deficit in the late innings, the Nats won the ball game with an attack on Clint Brown, Chicago relief specialist, in the first extra inning after the White Sox had tied the score in the ninth. Charley Gelbert was the hero of the winning run.

Off Gelbert's bat at the start of the tenth rocketed a lengthy three bagger which cleared the head of Rip Radcliff in the leftfield corner. Tagged up at third base, ready to run on Bloodworth's fly to center that followed, Gelbert merely trotted home when Centerfielder Larry Rosenthal lost the ball in the late-afternoon sun. It dropped safely.

Parade of Pitchers

Bucky Harris employed four pitchers—Alex Alexandra, Walter Masterson, Joe Haynes and Pete Appleton—in the Nats' uphill battle, and it was Appleton who received credit for the victory with a superlative performance in the last two innings.

Seven double plays marked the ball game, four by the Nats. Three times they extricated Alexandra from serious trouble in the first five innings with twin-killings, but after the Venezuelan had given up eight hits and four runs, Harris withdrew him for a pinch-hitter in the fifth, despite the fact that Alex had hit the fence with a two-bagger in his only turn at bat.

Sammy West saved the game for the Nats at one point in the tenth inning after McNair had singled to center with two out. Larry Rosenthal, who had hit a two-run homer against Alexandra in the second inning, bashed an enormous fly ball toward the center field fence and West cut off a run with a running catch near the wall.

Thornton Lee, who outlasted three Washington pitchers, was removed from the game for a pinch-hitter in the ninth when the White Sox tied the score at 5-5. He yielded eight of the Nats' 11 hits, the most forcible blow being Buddy Lewis' home with Case on base in the fifth which cut the Chicago lead to 4-3. The White Sox outhit the Nats, 14 to 11.

Two Over Fence

Until yesterday, only two home runs had been hit over Griffith Stadium's right wall this yar. Rosenthal's second inning clout and Lewis' fifth-inning wallop both cleared the fence with much margin to spare.

The three double plays they served up behind him saved Alexandra from a complete rout in the early innings. After Hayes led off the game in the first inning with a single to center, Mike Kreevich hit into a double play started by Gelbert. He was to hit into two more later in the day.

Rosenthal's homer with Radcliff on base set the Sox up in a 2-0 lead in the second and then the Nats regained a run on a walk to Estalella, Gelbert's single which moved him to third, and Bloodworth's double play grounder. But in the third the Sox barged into a 3-1 lead when Hayes tripled into the center field corner and scored on Kuhel's infield single. At this point Kreevich happily hit into another double play started by Gelbert.

Esty Halts Appling

It was 4-1 at the end of the fourth. Appling led off with a double to left but Bobby Estalella cut him down at the plate when he tried to score on Radcliff's single to left. Radcliff, who took second on the throw, moved home on McNair's single.

Through no fault of his own, Alex saw the bases filled with White Sox in the third and only one out, after Bloodworth muffed a grounder and Gelbert fumbled a throw from Vernon. But he escaped damage when Bloodworth made a diving one-hand catch of Appling's grounder and flipped it to Vernon for a double play.

After George Case singled with two out in the fifth, Lewis' homer cut the Sox lead to 4-3 and put the Nats back in the ball game, and in the sixth they tied the score. Esta-

Turfmen Call Odd Finish 1st of Kind

Establishes Record For Turf Finishes; Third Dead Heat Recorded in Sixth

Cleveland, Aug. 4 (AP).—The third race at Thistledown track ended today in a pair of dead heats, with Blue Play and My Corine tied for first, and Giggle Lee and Precious Toy tied for show. Blue Play and My Corine romped across the finish line in 1:06 3-5. Therace, for a $500 purse, was a claiming event for 2-year-old maidens.

Veteran track observers could not remember a similar finish in racing history.

My Corinne, the favorite, was hustled along at the start and forged to the front approaching the final furlong. Blue Play moved up with a rush on the inside in the stretch drive and finished in a tie.

Giggle Lee, never far back, bore out entering the stretch but held on to finish in a dead heat for show with Precious Toy. The two winners had a half length advantage over the second dead heat pair.

My Corinne paid $3.80 and Blue Play $5.80.

A third dead heat was recorded in the sixth when Anxiety and Time Please finished in a deadlock for second and third money behind Jay D. Bane. Jay D. Bane brought his backers $7.20, $2.60 and $2.60. Anxiety paid $2.20 and $2.40, while Time Please brought $2.40 and $2.60.

Pirates Take Opener, 3-2, From Giants

Spasms of Wildness Help Bucs Capture 11-Inning Game

Pittsburgh, Aug. 4 (AP).—Spasms of wildness by two New York Giants pitchers enabled the Pittsburgh Pirates to capture their series opener today, 3 to 2, in 11 innings.

Mel Ott gave the Giants a two-run lead in the first inning by hitting his twentieth homer of the season behind Harry Danning's double. But in the seventh Harry Gumbert weakened to give a single and two walks, the second coming with the bases loaded, and the tying run crossed on a double play.

Then in the eleventh Cliff Melton filled the bases on a single and two walks and Fern Bell singled home the winning run.

Walters Hurls; Reds Defeat Dodgers, 5-3

Losing Streak Broken As Pitcher Takes 19th Victory of Season

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 4.—Bucky Walters broke the Reds' two-game losing streak tonight by subduing the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5-to-3, for his nineteenth victory of the season. Dolf Camilli hit his seventeenth home run for the Dodgers.

Walters, the first pitcher in either major league to attain 19 victories, worked steadily and was in real trouble only in the sixth, when the Brooklyns put together a walk, a pair of singles and Ernie Koy's double for two runs after two were out. Camilli's homer in the ninth made up their total.

The Dodgers touched Buckey for eight hits in all, but three double plays, one by Frank McCormick unassisted and the other two by the familiar Frey, Myers and McCormick machine, prevented damage.

Every Redleg hit safely at least once for the entertainment of 26,056 fans.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

James Dykes, who will sign another two-year contract to manage the White Sox when he returns to Comiskey Park, figuratively guffaws at the suggestion that the Yankees should be broken up for the good of the league. "That is a laugh," Mr. Dykes was saying yesterday. "Why break 'em up? They're no super club."

POVICH

Whereupon the stout Mr. Dykes proceeded to take the Yankees apart and show by his own diagnosis that the league was being frightened by what it thinks is something under the bed.

"This Yankee club that's scaring everybody is hoodwinking the whole crowd," opined Mr. Dykes. "They have people believing they're a great ball team. Why, they're a bush outfit compared to those Yankees of 26-27-28, and they aren't near the club that we had with the Athletics in 1929-30-31. The trouble with this league isn't the Yankees, it's the rest of the league. They don't battle 'em.

"Any team that goes out there and gives the Yankees a fight can give 'em fits. Look what we did to 'em in New York last week. We lose two out of three to 'em, but they only score seven runs in the whole three games. That doesn't sound like the old Yankees, does it.

Claims Umpires Favor Yanks

"And another thing, the Yankees get the best of the umpires' decisions. It always happens that way. When I was with the A's in those pennant-winning years, we got the decisions from the umpires. It added up to 10 or 15 games a year for us and that's what it's doing for the Yankees.

"They aren't the same Yankees without Lou Gehrig. You can't lose a fellow like him and not get hurt. With the pressure on 'em, they aren't the old Yankees. They win a lot of games by big scores, sure, but that's when they've got a big lead and are out there swinging from their heels because it doesn't make any difference. If you get close to that Yankee outfit you can beat 'em. I've found that out. We've been beating 'em.

"The chief trouble is that the Yankees had the rest of the clubs in this league scared to death and went out and got a nine-game lead and are just coasting. They'd be a different club with the pressure on. Look what happened to 'em in five straight games against the Red Sox last month. They can get plenty panicky.

Crosetti's Average Comical

"It used to be DiMaggio, Dickey and Gehrig that gave 'em their power. Now it's only DiMag and Dickey. Dahlgren is no Yank. Those other fellows aren't hot. Crosetti's only hitting about .210 and that's a joke average. Selkirk wouldn't hit those home runs of his in any other park but Yankee Stadium. It's murder to see the rightfielders stand there against the fence and see Selkirk's line drives sail into those low stands.

"They've had to bench Henrich because he wasn't hitting, and they've got Kellar in there regularly now. He has yet to prove he's a big leaguer. DiMaggio is their only standout outfielder. The old Yanks always had three pips.

"You don't have to break up the Yanks. In another year or so there are a couple of clubs in this league that will catch up with 'em. The Red Sox need only the pitching. They've got more power than the Yanks. They've got the best-looking young player I've ever seen, too, in this Ted Williams. Greatest wrist action I ever saw. Why, one day in Boston he lost his grip on his bat and the darn thing sailed into the stands in right field; no kidding. That's power.

"The other day when we were playing the Yanks we shoulda beat 'em. They called one of our men out at second when he was as safe as the guys on Alcatraz. It made the difference between three on and none out and two one and one out, and lost us the ball game. I've seen some horrible decisions in my time, but that was the worst."

"We Shoulda Beat 'Em"

In his time Mr. Dykes admitted to being fined nigh onto $1,000 for squawking at umpire's decisions, but that apparently hasn't deterred him. He says he'll continue to squawk if he thinks he's in the right.

"I pay all my own fines, to," said Mr. Dykes. "All this talk about the club paying off for me is bunk. I've paid a fine as high as $250. Brick Owens put me out of the game one day for profanity. There was plenty of profanity, but that day I hadn't opened my mouth.

"Any time I think I'm getting a raw deal, I'm going to squawk, though. My players know I'll go to bat for 'em if I think they're right. The other day, against the Washington club, Eric McNair charged Umpire Lou Kolls and argued that Buddy Lewis should be out for interference. McNair dropped the ball on the play.

"I didn't say a word, because I knew it wasn't interference. It was only McNair's tough luck. The runner has a right to the baselines. Anyway, McNair quit arguing all of a sudden and came back to the bench after the inning was over. Know what he said?"

"No."

"Well, McNair said, 'I quit arguing with Kolls, Jimmy, when I looked around and saw I wasn't getting any help from you. I knew then I was wrong.'"

Riggs to Play Wood In Southampton Final

Bobby Wins Hollow Victory Over Kamrath, 4—6, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4, 6—2 at Meadow Club; Wood Beats Sutter, 6—2, 6—2, 7—5

By the Associated Press

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 4.—America's unhappy Davis Cup outlook grew no brighter today as Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, entered the final round of the forty-ninth annual Meadow Club invitation tournament with a hollow 3—6, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4, 6—2 victory over Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex. Riggs' opponent tomorrow, for the second successive year, will be Sidney Wood, who was equally unimpressive in defeating Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, 6—2, 6—2, 7—5.

If Bobby, the present Wimbledon champion, prevails over Wood, 1931 Wimbledon champion, it will give him the third leg on the $1,000 challenge bowl, and permanent possession. When the two met last year, the No. 2 singles post on the Davis Cup team hung in the balance, but the veteran Wood has admitted he is out of the running this time. Riggs beat Wood in straight sets in 1938.

WOOD

The doubles team of Don McNeill and Frankie Parker gained the final round, but rain interrupted the match between Riggs and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., who trailed Bill and Chester Murphy, of Chicago, 11—13, 4—2. McNeill and Parker defeated Frank Guernsey, jr., of Orlando, Fla., and Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, 6—2, 5—7, 7—9, 6—4, 6—2.

Riggs disappointed everyone with a wretched service. Kamrath, who has been playing indifferent tennis all summer, took all sorts of liberties with Riggs' first offering, and chased Bobby all over the court from the baseline.

Parker was easily the best doubles man on the court today. His peculiar arching service permitted only a soft return, which either he or McNeill usually stowed away.

Tennis Stars Move To Grass Court Play

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—America's tennis stars, augmented by the British Wightman Cup team, shift their activity to the Westchester Country Club tomorrow for the Eastern grass championships.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Alice Marble, of San Francisco, Wimbledon champions, head the American seeded list in their respective divisions.

Behind Riggs in the men's competition are Frankie Parker, Don McNeill, Sidney Wood, Bryan Grant, Elwood Cooke, Wayne Sabin and Gil Hunt. Seeded back of Miss Marble are Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, Dorothy May Bundy, Dorothy Workman, Helen Bernhard, Virginia Wolfenden and Patricia Canning.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley tied the women's competitive course mark in the weekly tourney yesterday at Indian Spring with a four over par 75. Mrs. Meckley's card included birdies on the eighth and fourteenth holes, both from short putts, as she played her approach shots dead to the pin over the entire round.

The former holder of the District, Maryland and Middle Atlantic titles at the same time was out in 37 and back in 38, two over men's par for each nine. She missed a four-foot putt for a four and 74 on the eighteenth green.

Low gross among the visiting players, in the largest field of the season, went to District Champion Mrs. Leo Walper, with an 85. Mrs. M. A. Mille, Kenwood, won first low net with 100-24, 76, while Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, Chevy Chase, 99-19, 80; Mrs. R. Springfield Gets Loane and His .000 Average

The Nats yesterday parted company with Outfielder Bob Loane and his .000 batting average. Loane was dispatched to the Springfield Club of the Eastern League, whence he came to Washington last week.

In twelve times at bat during his three-game tryout with the Nats, Loane failed to make a hit, although drawing three walks.

Manager Bucky Harris, obviously unimpressed, emphatically gave up on Loane. "He may be back for a tryout next spring," said Harris, "but if he does, I will be surprised."

Loane's departure leaves the Nats with only four outfielders—Case, Wright, Estalella and West, A husky right-handed hitter named Pitko will be imported from the Greenville club at the end of the Sally League season September 1.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 4 (AP).—Boxing Promoter Bill Patterson announced today he had offered Double Champion Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles Negro, a $20,000 purse to defend his welterweight title against Freddie (Red) Cochrane, of Elizabeth, the National Boxing Association's tenth ranking 147-pounder, late in October.

The match would be staged in the Newark Armory.

In the boys' division, Budge Patty, Los Angeles, favorite, came from behind in the first set to win, 6—4, then slipped through the second, 6—1, to eliminate third-seeded E. Blair Hawley, New York City.

Harry Likas, San Francisco, No. 2 boy, had little trouble with Robert Bensinger, Washington, D. C., 6—3, 6—2.

Charlotte Decker Retains Women's League Tennis Crown

Cunningham Loses Final In Three Sets

Champion Rallies To Win, 6–1, 3–6, 11–9; Decker-Cunningham Win Doubles Title

After rallying to overcome a 5-2 deficit in the third and deciding set and tie the score at 5-5, Charlotte Decker retained her singles title of the District Women's Tennis League tennis tournament yesterday with a 6—1, 3—6, 11—9 victory over unseeded Marian Cunningham on the Rock Creek courts.

Miss Decker's superior stamina and steadiness under fire enabled her to turn back the spirited Mrs. Cunningham who fought off three set points before losing the 2½-hour battle.

After a 10-minute rest Miss Decker and Mrs. Cunningham teamed to win the doubles title by taking the third set from Frances Carter and Joan Bransford, 6—2, in a match that was resumed from Friday when the new champions won the first set, 6—2, and dropped the second, 7—5.

Despite the intense heat, the Decker-Cunningham match was very well played and produced some of the finest tennis of the tournament. After being decidedly outplayed in the first set, in which she won only the first game, Mrs. Cunningham came back strongly to square the match.

She continued this hot streak in the third set and took leads of 3—1, 4—2 and finally 5—2 before Miss Decker began the great comeback which tied the score and gave her a chance to finally salvage the well-deserved triumph.

Margaret Graham defeated Ruth Rhetts in the final round of the consolation singles, 2—6, 8—6, 6—4.

Yanks' Batboy Outguesses the Umpire at Home Plate

In this case Umpire Joe LaRue was wrong and Batboy Tim Sullivan, of the New York Yanks, was right. LaRue called Pitcher Oral Hildebrand out as he crashed into Cleveland's Rollie Hemsley attempting to score in the fifth inning of yesterday's game, which the Yanks won, 5-4. Hemsley dropped the ball, however, and the ump was forced to concur with the batboy

Trotter Gives 7 Hits, Browns Defeat Macks

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 4.—Bill Trotter outpitched Bob Joyce today as the St. Louis Browns came from behind to beat the Athletics, 3 to 1.

Trotter yielded only seven hits, two of them coming in the first inning when the A's scored their run on Wally Moses' single and Dick Siebert's double. Joyce weakened after hurling shutout ball for five innings.

Joe Glenn's Texas league single tied the score in the sixth. In the eighth Harlond Clift drove a home run into the leftfield stands to put the Browns ahead. They added an unearned tally in the ninth on Glenn's long sacrifice fly after successive errors by Bill ..agel, Skeeter Newsome and an international walk to Myril Hoag had filled the bases.

Alice Marble Plays Helen Jacobs Today

By the Associated Press.

East Hampton, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., both of whom have held every important championship in women's tennis, will meet tomorrow in the final round of the annual Maidstone Club invitation tournament.

Miss Marble gained the title round today with a sparkling 6—3, 6—1 triumph over Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, but Miss Jacobs met sterner stuff in the person of Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., whom she finally defeated; 8—6, 5—7, 6—3.

Miss Workman, runner-up in the tournament last year to Barbara Winslow, tried every part of her extensive stroke equipment in an effort to find a weakness in Miss Marble's armor. But the Wimbledon champion showed no flaws, hitting in spirited fashion and passing her opponent accurately whenever the occasion demanded.

Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan entered the final round of the doubles when they defeated Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, New York, and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, 6—2, 6—1. The other final round pair are Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, and Miss Jacobs, who defeated Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, and Miss Workman, 6—1, 6—4.

Jasper Post Scores Again In Play-Offs

Leaving no doubt of its right to the American Junior Legion League championship, Sergt. Jasper representatives crushed Fort Stevens under a 9-1 count yesterday for their second consecutive victory in the playoff for the league title. They trounced the Fortmen earlier in the week by a 12-4 margin.

Once again it was Billy Fisher, the little speed-baller from Central High, who led Jasper to victory. In 1938 he also won the title. His six-hit hurling yesterday bettered the performance of Fort Stevens' Price by nine hits, and he was always ahead of the batters after a shaky beginning. Fort Stevens scored its only run in the first inning.

The sweep of the playoff earned for Jasper nine a trip to Belmont, N. C., and a berth in the Eastern regional American Legion championships beginning next Friday. Coach Mark Jackson and Manager Dan Paterson will accompany the club.

Burnett Forced Out Of Intercity Golf Matches Tomorrow

The District's hopes for a decisive victory over Baltimore's all-star amateurs in the intercity team match tomorrow at Manor were further dimmed yesterday when Volney Burnett, one of the first four players on the team, announced he would be unable to play. Burnett will be on duty in the fire department.

With Ralph Bogart, Page Hufty and Billy Shea already out of the line-up, Capt. Roger Peacock has already used up the four alternates and may have to call on two or three additional players to fill out the team.

Alternates Louis Fuchs, Gene Pittman, John Bergelin and Tommy Bones will play, while Billy Dettweiler may also start against the Monumental City's top amateur golfers.

The match will begin at 1 p. m.

Cards Rally In 9th, Beat Phils in 13th

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 4.—Everyone in St. Louis takes back everything thing they've ever said about Joe Medwick.

The fighting gentleman from Carteret, N. J., back in good graces after a tempermental run-in with Manager Ray Blades, batted the St. Louis Cardinals to a thrilling 9-to-8 victory over Philadelphia in 13 innings today.

Medwick got four hits in the drawn-out battle, including three doubles, one of them tying the score in the ninth and another driving in Stuart Martin with the winning run. Martin had singled and gone to second on Enos Slaughter's sacrifice.

Dizzy's Wife Rests After Operation

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Patricia Dean, Dizzy Dean's wife, underwent a major abdominal operation today at Illinois Masonic Hospital and came through in "good condition."

Dr. John P. Davis, Mrs. Dean's physician, said she was "resting comfortably" after the operation, and that her condition "was as good as could be expected."

He added she would be confined to the hospital for about two weeks. Dizzy, the eccentric pitcher for the Chicago Cubs, was not in uniform today, remaining by his wife's side during the ball game.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

Six Nats figure in the man of the Month awards following yesterday's thrill-packed victory over the White Sox. Points were distributed as follows:

To Charley Gelbert, three points, because his tenth-inning triple led to the winning run, because he hit an important single earlier in the game and because he played a brilliant defensive game.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because his two-run homer in the fifth put the Nats back in the ball game.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because he drove in the tying run with a long fly in the sixth and because he singled in the eighth for what appeared to be the winning run.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, one point, because his tenth-inning fly which dropped safely drove in the winning run and because he figured in three clever double plays.

To Sammy West, one point, because he hit a pair of two-baggers and saved the game in the tenth with a brilliant running catch.

To Pete Appleton, one point, because as a relief pitcher he held the winning runs on base with one out in the ninth and turned the Sox back scoreless in the tenth. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	3	Estalella	2
George Case	6	Vernon	2
Dutch Leonard	5	Rick Ferrell	2
Angelo Giuliani	5	Jimmy Bloodworth	2

Three Indian Homers In Vain; Yanks Win, 5-4

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 4.—It takes more than home runs to beat the world champion Yankees. Three Cleveland batters hit round-trippers today but their blows were no match for the assortment of 12 hits New York put together in a -to4 triumph over the Tribe.

Oral Hildebrand and Marius Russo limited the Indians to five hits, which included a home run by Ha lTrotsky with one on in the first, another by Odell Hale in the second and one by Jeff Heath in the seventh to account for all Cleveland's runs.

Lefty Al Milnar, who had beaten the champions once, started well and held them to one run and three hits for four innings only to weaken in the fifth and sixth, finally giving way to a pinchhitter.

Errors, which cost the Indians a game at Boston yesterday when they made six, figured in the setback today. In the first inning Red Rolfe walked, moved to third on Charley Keller's single and scored when Bruce Campbell muffed Joe DiMaggio's sacrifice fly.

Passeau Wins 1-0 Victory From Boston

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Claude Passeau shadded Lou Fette in a pitchers' battle today, giving the Chicago Cubs a 1-to-0 victory over the Boston Bees in their series opener.

Passeau yielded only four hits and gave no walks in chalking up his ninth mound decision.

Three times during the game Passeau was warned against using the illegal spitball by the umpires after Boston batters had complained about the pitcher's offerings.

The game's only run came in the third inning when Stan Hack walked, went to third on Bill Herman's single and scored on Augie Galan's sacrifice fly.

It was the Cubs' sixth win in their last eight games.

Ken Chase Faces White Sox Today; Knott to Oppose

Ken Chase, seeking his third straight victory, will attempt to extend the Nats' winning streak to six straight today when he takes the mound against the White Sox in the second game of the current series.

Jack Knott, who held the Nats to two hits in June in his last appearance at Griffith Stadium, is the pitching choice of Manager Jimmy Dykes.

Manager Bucky Harris is expected to retain Charley Gelbert at the shortstop post in view of Gelbert's sensational play since replacing Cecil Travis.

Welsh Heads Mid-Atlantic Tennis Field

Tourney, Opening Today, Draws No Strong Outsiders

By Jack Munhall.

With not a single formidable outsider among the field of 64, the Middle Atlantic tennis championships opening today at Edgemoor Club promise to be merely an anticlimax of the recent District championships in which Barney Welsh waltzed off with his seventh successive title.

Though Tom Mangan, head of the tournament committee, was confident all week of gathering a representative field from Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland, the other members of the M. A. Association, the entries closed yesterday afternoon without the name of any of the players sought.

Gilbert Hunt, a Washington boy and the tenth ranking player in the country, sent word by telephone yesterday that he would pass up the event to play at Rye and similarly Deacon Parsons, West Virginia champion, and others expected here made excuses.

Robert Shanklin and Ed Blickle, Huntington's crack doubles team which defeated Barney Welsh and Ralph Adair for the West Virginia open title not long ago, refused at the last minute an offer of the committee to put them up during the tournament.

So at the moment the doubles tournament, entries for which close this evening at 6 o'clock, looms almost as predestined as the singles. Only the entry of the Baltimore champions, Frank Roberts and Alex Keiles, makes another sweeping title march by Barney Welsh and Dooly Mitchell uncertain.

Welsh, defending champion, who will be seeking his second leg on The Washington Post bowl, which is retired by three victories, has been seeded first. He is followed by Hugh Lynch, his runner-up in the District championships; Davie Johnson, City of Washington champion; James Farrin, C. Alphonso Smith, Frank Shore, Ralph Adair and Allie Ritzenberg.

2 p. m.—Hugh Lynch vs. Harold Jase; Henry Sweeney vs. Felix Smith; Robert Williams vs. Billy Contreras; Ralph Adair vs. John Caffery; Ryland Willis vs. Don Marvin.

Eight Thirty Heavy Favorite in Saratoga Handicap Today

Hotel Stakes For Juveniles Also Carded

Feature to Draw 11 Stars at Spa; Hotel Will See Largest Field in History

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Eight Thirty comes back to the races tomorrow in the Saratoga Handicap, and once more George D. Widener's speedster, which may yet give Johnstown and Challedon a run for 3-year-old honors, is favored over the older fellows.

Along with the 38-year-old mile and a quarter gallop for 3-year-olds and up, the Spa's Saturday card presents another historic stake in the United States Hotel's 6 furlongs, a 2-year-old dash with an important bearing annually on the juvenile situation. This has drawn 18 entries and the barrier may be sprung on the largest field ever to start in its 37 runnings.

Each of the races will be worth about $11,000.

Assigned 106 Pounds

Eight Thirty heads a field of 11 in the Saratoga, and so well is the chestnut son of Pilate regarded, as a result of his victory Wednesday over Pompoon, Main Man and Fighting Fox in the Wilson Stakes, that he has been assigned 106 pounds. Since he's the only 3-year-old in the field, his burden, by comparison, is just a pound off the 118 which Louis B. Mayer's top-weighted 5-year-old, Main Man, will carry.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer's brown son of Neddie, Nedayr, winner of the American Legion Handicap Monday, figures, along with Main Man, Maxwell Howard's The Chief, Mrs. B. F. Whitaker's Sickle T. and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Heelfly, to provide most of the opposition for Eight Thirty, which is being readied for a meeting with Johnstown in the forthcoming Travers.

Wide-Open Affair

Since little is known of several of the entries in the United States Hotel Stakes, won last year by El Chico, the 2-year-old event is a wide-open affair. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons has a likely looking three-horse entry from the stables of William Woodward and Mrs. H. C. Phipps, in Asp, which won a 5½-furlong dash Monday in his third outing; Merry Knight and Fenelon, a pair of fast Sir Galllahad III colts.

Epatant, a son of Stimulus and winner of the Flash Stakes this week after two victories at Belmont, also is well liked.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP).—After appearing to be hopelessly beaten on the backstretch, J. H. Whitney's lean colt, Heather Broom, staged a snsational rally through the home stretch and just got up to score a proto finish triumph in the one mile Saranac Handicap, which had its thirty-seventh running here this cloudy afternoon. Basil James, riding his second winner of the day, drove the chestnut son of The Porter past the wire with a head margin over Samuel Bachrach's Golden Voyage, which was filling his lone stake engagement of the meeting.

Nitro, fresh from a record breaking performance at Empire City, and favorite at 13 to 5 in the field of six three-year-olds, lost the place by three lengths. The Falaise Stable's colt pulled up decidedly lame.

Federal Loan Insurance Unit Assets Expand

Income Totaled $5,662,974, Expenses Were $213,122

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation operated in the fiscal year ended June 30, at a low cost ratio of 3.8 cents for each dollar of its gross income, General Manager Nugent Fallon reports. The corporation's total income for that period was $5,662,974, of which $213,122 was used for operating expenses.

During the year, assets increased $5,300,000 to $119,400,000 and the organization now has $100,000,000 in capital and $18,283,243 of surplus and reserves, Mr. Fallon states. Premium income for the year, which is paid by the insured units, was $2,292,000, a gain of $410,000 over the preceding fiscal year.

Admission fees for newly insured institutions for this period aggregated $45,353. Investments of the corporation totaling $117,863,279 are entirely in securities of, or securities guaranteed by, the United States. Losses for the year amounted to $285,989 in the form of contributions to three insured associations to enable them to effect a merger or reorganize and continue business, avoiding expense of liquidation.

On its establishment by Congress in June, 1934, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation was granted an initial capital of $100,000,000, and since then, reserves have risen continuously.

Banks Extend Home Loans

Washington banks continue to extend loans in great numbers and considerable amounts for property repair, alteration and modernization under Title 1 of the revised National housing act.

A survey of the Title 1 loan situation reveals that from February 3, 1938, date on which the amended National housing act went into effect, to May 31, 1939, lending institutions with headquarters in the District of Columbia granted 4,362 such loans.

These involved the sum of $1,847,954, which has been spent principally in Washington.

In the same period, 3,189 Title 1 loans, totaling $1,374,557, were extended on properties within the District.

Home mortgage insurance of the Federal Housing Administration was 33 per cent larger in the first half of 1939 than in 1938, according to a report which showed that mortgages accepted amounted to $367,845,000, as compared with $277,370,000 a year ago.

In the first half year, small home mortgages selected for appraisal amounted to $802,000,000 as compared with $455,200,000, in 1938. However, a larger proportion of the total is to be used for building of new homes, with $410,200,000 involving new houses, as compared with $248,500,000 in the same 1938 period.

Small home mortgages selected for appraisal amounted to $101,500,564, in June, the fourth consecutive month in which the total exceeded $100,000,000. This was an increase of 4.4 per cent over June, 1938, total of $97,231,622 and a drop of 8 per cent from the May level of $109,442,140.

New Securities Total $64,207,196 in Week

New York, Aug. 4 (AP).—New securities offered to the public during the week ended yesterday totaled $64,207,196, compared with $40,741,500 the previous week and $7,165,497 a year ago, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 4.—Prices swerved narrowly both ways in stock market dealings today. Attendance by traders, however, was far below normal in view of the long week-end recess which includes a bank holiday. British funds, wobbly at the start, finished higher. Trans-Atlantics moved listlessly and mostly a shade lower. Japanese bonds were under moderate pressure. A few buyers nibbled at oil and rubber securities while kaffirs and coppers were neglected. Domestic rails weakened following a hitch in wage negotiations. Industrials moved narrowly both ways.

Paris.—Bourse prices drifted erratically in listless dealings today. Traders saw nothing very exciting in reports of Japanese adherence to the Berlin-Rome military agreement. Gold mining shares and Royal Dutch were firm on arbitrage demand. Rentes closed down 10 to up 6 centimes.

Liverpool.—Reports of crop damage plus short covering in the wake of higher Canadian shippers' offerings buoyed wheat futures today. Closing prices were up ½ to ¾ penny. Cotton futures advanced 2 to 3 points on a little Bombay and speculative demand but the market generally was a preholiday affair.

Committee Urges N. J. Central and Reading Merger

A committee representing bondholders of the Central Railroad Co. of New Jersey urged the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to "give serious consideration" to the desirability of consolidating that carrier with the Reading Railroad.

The committee filed a brief with the ICC in opposition to the Central of New Jersey's plan for voluntary readjustment of its capital structure.

The committee said it believed the adjustments it suggested "could be accomplished herein in connection with a consolidation" of the Central of New Jersey and the Reading.

Wheat Closes Weak After Early Rise

Traders Mark Time, Await Clarifying Of Crop Loans

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 4.—Wheat prices sagged ½ cent a bushel in late trade today after having scored gains of about a cent. The close was unchanged to ¼ down.

Trade was light and easily influenced by moderate buying or selling while a waiting attitude developed pending clarification of the Government's crop loan program.

Restoration of a $119,000,000 fund for crop loans to the session's last appropriation bill by a Senate subcommittee had no immediate effect on prices. The bill was expected to go to the Senate floor for debate later today.

September wheat, leading the early advance here, was 1⅛ cents up at 65¼, but closed unchanged to ¼ off at 64@64⅛, while December finished at 64¾@64⅞, also unchanged to ¼ down. Corn closed ⅛@⅜ up, September 42⅛@42¼, December 42@42¼; oats unchanged to ¼ up, soy beans ¼@½ up, rye ⅛@¼ up, lard unchanged to 3 cents down.

Security Prices Suffer Sharpest Decline Of Five Weeks Under Profit-Taking; Treasury Issues Lead Bond Dip

New York, Aug. 4.—Prices receded under a wave of profit-taking today, but on a volume of trading that was somewhat less than on the best days of the upswing. The composite average showed a decline of 0.84 point. This was the sharpest daily decline in about five weeks. There was some improvement before the close and fractional changes were still in the majority, but a few of the speculative leaders gave up 1 to 2 points.

Business news was not bearish, except for the week-end report on automobile production. With only Ford operating normally this week, while other major manufacturers were rushing to get into production on 1940 models, and handling their strikes, the output fell to 28,250 cars and trucks. This compared with 40,595 units last week.

Sentiment Is Favorable

It takes more than one such bit of statistics to make the business chart, however, and sentiment in the financial district holds to the favorable side. This is based not only on the gradual improvement which has been reflected by the leading compilations on indices of business but on the complete reversal which took place in the field of politics as Congress prepared to go home.

The Senate Appropriations Committee sent to the floor of the Senate today the third deficiency bill, providing for appropriations totaling about $135,000,000 more than the $54,000,000 provided by the House. A possible expenditure of this nature, falling into a class which the President might, with more justice, term "litty-bitty" expenditures, cannot have caused any serious disruption in investment circles.

Foreign News Unfavorable

The nature of the day's foreign news, however, was far less favorable. It has been some weeks since Wall Street felt called upon to worry about international complications, but there were a few signs of a return of the fever today.

News from Italy was to the effect that Japan's closer adherence to the Rome-Berlin axis is under discussion by the Japanese ambassadors to Italy and Germany. Prime Minister Chamberlain, while warning Japan that Great Britain might find it necessary to send a fleet to the Near East, said that such action might already have been taken had it not been for the critical condition in Europe. This was a tacit admission that the British fleet could not take care of a Far Eastern and a European enemy at the same time. Further concentration of German troops near the Polish frontier increased the tension.

War Tension Again Appears

So while one of the two major factors which shape our present-day markets appears to have been under control, namely politics, the other major influence, which is the threat of war, is showing signs of breaking out again. A market letter writer sums up this situation succinctly with the statement that there isn't any particular thing wrong with business, or at least there would not be, if the influence of politics and the whims of politics were removed. He finds that confidence is slowly being re-established, due to the fact that more and more people are realizing that the aggressors and agitators are nearing the "end of the rope," a term that is used figuratively and not literally.

In security markets yesterday the utilities were not as active as on the days of advance early in the week. Loft was the most active stock. Motors and Chrysler sold off 1 and 1¾ points, while Steel and Bethlehem were down 2¼ and 2⅛, respectively.

Bond Trading Lower

Listed bonds developed an easy tone today, with losses ranging from small fractions to 2 points. The decline took in both the high-grade investment securities and the speculative issues, and apparently reflected week-end profit-taking to a degree. Foreign dollar issues showed more resistance than domestic obligations, owing to confirmation of reports that formal negotiations soon will start with Brazil on the default of that country. Turnover was $5,200,000.

Treasury Issues Decline

United States Treasury bonds slumped 1-32 to 15-32 point, plainly because new money borrowing is held likely next month. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations drifted a little lower. Telephone bonds held their ground, and changes were unimportant in the leading power and light, railroad and industrial bonds.

Medium-priced railroad obligations sold off rather sharply, in some instances. The more active speculative bonds fell 1 to 2 points. Borderline and default rails were not in demand. Among holding company issues the main trend was lower, but some issues advanced. Industrial convertibles displayed some uncertainty, and communications issues lost some of their recent gains. Local tractions moved irregularly lower.

Foreigns in Demand

Brazilian bonds improved fractionally, on the protective council announcement that Dr. Dana G. Munro is proceeding to Rio for debt talks. Chileans also were strong, but other Latin-American default bonds moved little. The Japanese group continued to recede into lower ground. German bonds were neglected and not much changed, while Italian and Polish securities were steady. Best grade foreigns reflected buying.

Refrigerator Eggs Hit Six-Year Low

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP).—Lowest August prices for refrigerator eggs in six years were reached today on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange when the October contract touched a new seasonal low of 18.20 cents under further active liquidation and stop-loss selling. The final price was 18.25 cents. November butter also continued on the down grade and closed with a loss of 20 points at 23.70 cents. The DPMA purchased nearly 300,000 pounds of butter in Chicago and New York.

Cotton Futures Dip 25 to 45 Cents In Late Selling

New York, Aug 4 (AP).—A last-minute selling flurry upset the calm of a waiting cotton futures market today. Final prices were off 5 to 9 points.

Reports to the trade that Texas rains—highly beneficial to the crop—might become general started the late pressure. The heavy Texas rains and Oklahoma showers came to regions recently affected by exceedingly hot and dry conditions.

What the market was most interested in, however, was final Congressional action on the third deficiency bill. Senate adoption of a committee amendment to restore $119,000,000 to help repair the capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation came after the close.

The Senate-approved bill now is headed for the House and most traders expected little market action until that body acts.

Two young brothers were injured when the bicycle both were riding was struck by a truck in the 2100 block of Thirty-seventh street northwest. The boys, Raymond Sutton, 6, and Granger G. Sutton, jr., 9, of 3615 T street northwest, were treated at Georgetown Hospital for head injuries.

Norman Mensh, 6, of 722 Fourth street southwest, was seriously injured by an automobile in the 600 block of Sixth street southwest. At Providence Hospital he was said to have multiple lacerations of the face, head and body and possible internal injuries.

Steel Companies Win Hearing on U. S. Wage Ruling

Steel companies which have disputed the Labor Department's right to determine a prevailing wage under the Walsh-Healy act to be paid by firms awarded Government contracts yesterday won the right to have their complaint heard in District Court.

The Court of Appeals reversed an order dismissing the steel companies' petition for an injunction and continued an injunction against enforcement of the wage order until the case is settled.

Lukens Steel Co., Alan Wood Steel Co. and South Chester Steel Co. filed the suit, complaining the minimum wage orders would prevent them from bidding for Government contracts.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee defended the wage orders.

Justices Miller and Vinson held the steel firms were entitled to have the case tried instead of being dismissed without hearing. Justice Edgerton disagreed.

Dr. Smith Enters Not-Guilty Plea In Mail Fraud

New Orleans, La., Aug. 4 (INS).—Shuttled to and from the parish jail in Baton Rouge and the Federal jail in New Orleans since his arrest, Dr. James Monroe Smith tonight was temporarily back in a Federal cell after pleading not guilty with four others to charges of mail fraud.

He may, however, be taken again to the parish jail at any time State authorities make a request for him.

Those pleading with him before Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah today were Seymour Weiss, millionaire New Orleans hotel operator and formed key man in Huey P. Long's machine; Louis C. Lesage, suspended official of the Standard Oil Co.; Monte Hart, wealthy contractor, and J. Emory Adams, nephew of Dr. Smith's wife.

September 5 was set as the date for the trial of the five defendants.

CafeteriaEmployes Vote for Strike

A unanimous vote to strike to obtain a preferential shop, the check-off and wage increases was taken by cafeteria employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing last night. When the strike would get under way was not announced. Employes are affiliated with Local 515 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance of the A. F. L.

The management had agreed to the following, accepted by the union: Two meals per day at 35 cents a meal with the employe having the right to select from the daily fare; a three-week vacation with pay; time and a half pay for overtime; all holidays observed by the Government free with pay.

Mars Isn't Red, Star-Photographer Here Asserts

A sky-poking cameraman is astronomer John E. Willis, of the Naval Observatory, who last night said in a broadcast over station WRC that photography has made visible planets which can not be seen through the most powerful telescopes. He answered rapid-fire questions on the work of a star-gazer.

Willis knows Mars is not red, as so many people think. There are large greenish areas on the planet and large white polar caps quite like our polar regions; the remainder is sand colored. He recently photographed Mars through red, green and blue filters which help to show different features of the surface of the planet and indicate the color of its reflected light.

Why do photographs of planetary bodies appear so blurred when they're developed? For the same reason that stars twinkle, replied Willis.

Ditch Cave-In Injures Workman

David Lindsay, a laborer, of 2640 I street northwest, was pinned up to his shoulders in a cave-in ditch in the 300 block of Old Georgetown road, Bethesda, Md., yesterday for an hour while fellow laborers and Bethesda rescue squad members worked to get him out.

Lindsey was treated by Dr. Leo Donovan, of Bethesda, while he was dug out and was taken to Georgetown University Hospital. A fellow laborer, James McCray, colored, 1815 Fifteenth street northwest, was extricated quickly and was not injured.

Labor Board Issues Order on Spying

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered the General Motors Corporation to discontinue alleged espionage upon the union activities of employes at one of its subsidiary plants, the Delco-Remy Co., Anderson, Ind.

The board ordered the corporation to protect employes at the Delco-Remy plant from "physical assaults or threats of physical violence" designed to discourage membership in the International Union of United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Although the board found that the Delco-Remy Employes' Association, Inc., was a company union and must be disestablished, it ruled that the corporation did not encourage the Citizens' League for Industrial Security, another organization about which complaints were received.

Mrs. Helen Herr's Funeral Monday In Pennsylvania

Services for Mrs. Helen Dougal Herr, of an old Georgetown family whose death occurred yesterday in Wayne, Pa., will be held in Wayne on Monday, relatives here said yesterday.

Mrs. Herr was a native of Georgetown and the daughter of the late William H. and Mary Virginia Dougal, whose home was one of the houses built on the heights of Georgetown in 1852.

She was the widow of the Rev. Charles Herr, D.D., also a native of Georgetown. Mrs. Herr is survived by a son, Judge Dougal Herr, of Essex Falls, N. J.; three daughters, Misses Helen and Margaret Herr, of Wayne, and Mrs. Ellis Barnes, of Haverford, Pa.; four grandchildren, two sisters, Mrs. Walter T. Wheatley and Miss Katherine Dougal, and a brother, William M. Dougal, all of Washington.

Congress Makes Alien a Citizen

By the Associated Press.

Congress has voted citizenship for John Ullman, jr., a representative of American tobacco firms in China, who served 30 years in the United States Navy under the impression he was a citizen.

Uullman, now in this country, cannot return to his wife and four children in Shanghai until President Roosevelt signs the bill. Neither can he bring his family to America.

When Ullman came to the United States last February, he learned he had not acquired citizenship when his father, who emigrated from Russia, was naturalized in 1914. At that time the son had reached his majority.

Marlboro Youth Held in $1,000 Bond As Drunk Driver

Walter C. Euwer, 18, of Upper Marlboro, Md., was released on $1,000 bond yesterday after his arrest, on charges of driving while under the influence of liquor, by Montgomery County policemen at Bethesda, Md.

Police said that Euwer had driven his car across Chevy Chase Circle while being chased by County Policemen R. L. Phillips and Edward Shoemaker. The youth was driver of a car which left a barbecue establishment at Wisconsin avenue and Western avenue, police said, by plunging across a putting green and down a 7-foot bank, spilling a girl passenger to the ground. Policemen followed the car out Western avenue to the circle. Two other girls and a youth were passengers in the car.

Frequently players seeking information report the facts accurately but leave out some point vital to the analyst. It may show up in a hand with but 12 cards. Or it may be the failure to explain what understanding the pair had concerning the use of a conventional bid that might have several interpretations. In such instances we surmise the players entered into the partnership without setting their signals straight. At least, this would appear to be the case in the misadventure recounted by Col. H. P. C., in which a misunderstanding of a slam invitation resulted in a defeated grand slam.

North (a speculative bidder) deals and immediately bids four spades. South has this hand:

♠ J 10 7 3
♡ K 2
◇ A Q J 7
♣ A K Q

South bids four no trump. North bids seven spades and is set one trick, losing to the ace of hearts. North claims that South showed all three aces by bidding four no trump.

The colonel asks: "Should South have bid four no trump? What should South have bid? Was North's bidding correct?"

According to the Culbertson four-five no trump convention, the call shows either two aces and the king of a suit bid or any three aces.

Inasmuch as spade was the only suit declared, and North presumably held the king of spades himself, he could rightfully assume that South held three aces.

However, there is no indication in the colonel's letter that the pair had decided upon the Culbertson convention. If it was just a normal four no-trump call, used by many experts to indicate general strength and to invite a slam, there was no reason for North to presume any particular holding. In any case, North should have replied to South's query with a suitable response instead of leaping to seven.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The stewing of juices:

"THE Federal worker today looks back on a year of bitter disappointment. Just a year ago a splendid prospect appeared with the President's executive orders of June 24, 1938, of improving the public service through the development of a promotional method, training, personnel administration, and wide extension of the civil service. In the winter the civil service committee considered civil service extension and reported out an excellent bill. At the same time, a bill was reported providing for improvements in the retirement plan. Today, of all these hopes, very little is left. The only positive accomplishment of any importance is the accomplishment that the President could make without the aid of Congress. Every single important act that required action by Congress for the improvement of the public service is today unperformed."—From a statement by Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. president.

Meanwhile, Baker continued, the U. F. W. A. is urging the Senate committee to restore the budget estimates, hoping that the training program and promotions can yet be salvaged.

THE A. F. G. E. is more philosophical, taking the view that if Santa Claus didn't bring much, he at least didn't fill the hopeful stockings with ashes and chastising rods. Says it:

"Congress, now on the last lap, has not done as much for Government employes as might have been hoped for, but on the other hand it hasn't done much to them. Furthermore, legislation of considerable importance to the employe group has at last got a start and there is still another session of the present Congress, even if it is not called in a special session."

More prison guards, for example, have been provided for, with a shortening of hours, though much is still needed in a situation where the guards stay about as long in the prisons as the prisoners, the A. F. G. E. inferred.

Custodial employes benefited somewhat.

Then there was the Romjue bill, relieving postal workers from an onerous charge against leave for Saturdays (nonwork days under ordinary circumstances) occurring in an annual leave period, was among the first laws to get on the statute books, it was pointed out.

"The record, therefore, is good, though not as good as had been hoped for. Meantime, several attacks on Government employes and on the merit system—these crop up all the time—have been beaten off, and there have been no real setbacks in any quarter," the statement continued.

Somehow, the Diarist isn't surprised. In truth, the column did battle for all the boons and benefits—but with the knowledge that Congress is not thoroughly sold on the idea of merit, or particularly on the notion of improving the Federal personnel. The Congressmen know that the voters back home won't take slights to Federal employes to the voting polls with them. So things move slowly. And the employes may be glad that Congress didn't do worse.

THE capacity for work native to the muscle and mind of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes daily confounds this column and excites its profound admiration. The conclusion that he has this unheard of capacity is reached through the swarm of press releases emanating from the department's active press section. Example: "The largest supply of Pribilof Island fur-seal skins in a half century was taken this season, it was reported today to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes." . . . If a new national park is developed, or Old Faithful is spouting 6 inches below the normal for 1916, or a new arrow head has been added to the museum, or a new floorsweeper is hired, or if a gang of great barytones has been recruited for the Easter sunrise services in the parks—it all goes to the Secretary of the Interior. All of the releases say so, and there, ladies and gentleman, is one hard working man on the public pay roll.

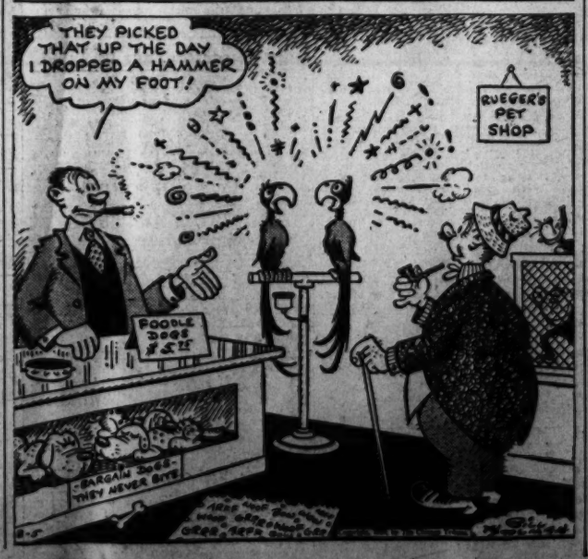
NOTES: J. Clyde Marquis, former director of information for the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and now American representative to and vice president of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, will speak at a special meeting of the Farm Hands' Club Tuesday. Farm Hands' Club is an informal group of agriculture workers that meets at the Harrington Hotel each Tuesday. Admission to the Tuesday meeting will be by ticket, because of the anticipated large attendance. Cards can be obtained from O. M. Kile, Edgar Markham, K. H. Hunter, George B. Arner, E. W. Stillwell and A. M. Loomis, of the department.

Worth remembering: The outing to be held today at Marshall Hall by the Patent Office Recreation Association. They will choose "Miss Popularity."

UNITED STATES Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker announced yesterday tha the Office of Education-sponsored program, "Democracy in Action," originally scheduled to go off the air August 6, will continue.

The series began May 14, supplementing and interpreting the World's Fair exhibits on Federal activities. The first broadcast in the additional series is entitled "Guarding the Nation's Health."

NUTS AND JOLTS



PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

CHAPTER LX

"YES, and that's jest why I don't crave for Jody to do it 'til he's got his growth and his strength."

"Old butter-hearted," Ma muttered. "Plowin' never hurt nobody."

She pounded poke-root and boiled it and made poultices for him, and made him a tonic of prickly ash and poke root and potassium. He accepted her ministrations gratefully, but was not better. He went back to his panther oil, and rubbed his knees patiently with it, an hour at a time, and said it helped him more than the other remedies.

While his father was idle, Jody did the light chores and kept up with the wood. He had an incentive to hurry at his work, for when it was done he was free to wander away with Flag. Penny even permitted him to take the shotgun with him. He missed his father's company, yet he liked to hunt alone. He and Flag were free together. They liked best going to the sink-hole. They had stumbled on a game there one day when Flag had gone with him when he went to fetch drinking water. The game was a mad one of tag, up and down the steep slopes of the great green bowl. Flag was unbeatable at it, for he was up and down one side half a dozen times while Jody was making one climb to the top. Finding that he could not be caught, he alternated between a teasing business of wearing Jody out, and a more satisfying and ingratiating trick of deliberately allowing himself to be captured.

On a warm, sunny day in mid-February, Jody looked up from the bottom of the sink-hole. Flag stood in silhouette at the top. For a startled moment it seemed to him that it was another deer. Flag was so big. He had not seen how fast he was growing. Many a young yearling shot for food was no bigger than he. He went home to Penny in excitement. Penny sat by the kitchen hearth, wrapped in quilts, though the day was mild.

"I been thinkin' that myself lately. Give him a month more, I'd say he was a yearlin'."

"How'll he be different?"

"Well, he'll stay off in the woods longer. He'll grow a good bit bigger. He'll be betwixt and between. He'll be like a person standin' on the State line. He'll be leavin' one and turnin' into t'other. Behind him's the fawn. Before him's the buck."

Jody stared into vacancy.

"Will he have horns?"

"He'll likely not show no horns before July. The bucks is sheddin' their horns right now. They'll be butt-headed all through the spring. Then along in the summer the spikes'll show and by ruttin' season they'll have full sets agin."

JODY EXAMINED Flag's head carefully. He felt the hard edge of his forehead. Ma Baxter passed with a pan in her hand.

"Hey, Ma, Flag'll soon be a yearlin'. Won't he be purty, Ma, with leetle ol' horns Won't his horns be purty?"

"He'd not look purty to me did he have a crown on. And angel's wings."

He followed her to cajole her. She sat down to look over the dried cow-peas in the pan. He rubbed his nose over the down of her cheek. He liked the furry feel of it.

"Ma, you smell like a roastin' ear. A roastin' ear in the sun."

"Tain't that. Listen, Ma, you don't keer do Flag have horns or no. Do you?"

"Hit'll be that much more to butt and bother."

He did not press the point. Flag was in increasing disgrace, at best. He had learned to slip free from the halter about his neck. When it was tightened so that he could not get out of it, he used the same tactics that a calf used against restraint. He strained against it until his eyes bulged and his breathing choked, and to save his perverse life, it was necessary to release him. Then when he was free, he raised havoc. There was no holding him in the shed. He would have razed it to the ground. He was wild and impudent. He was allowed in the house only when Jody was on hand to keep up with him. But the closed door seemed to make him possessed to enter. If it was not barred, he butted it open. He watched his chance and slipped in to cause some minor damage whenever Ma Baxter's back was turned.

She set the dish of shelled dried peas on the table and went to the hearth. Jody went to his room to look for a piece of rawhide. There was a clatter and commotion and then Ma Baxter's storm of fury. Flag had leaped onto the table, seized a mouthful of the peas and sent the pan sprawling, the peas scattered from one end of the kitchen to the other. Jody came running. His mother threw the door open and drove Flag out with the broom. He seemed to enjoy the fracas. He kicked up his heels, flicked his white flag of a tail, shook his head as though threatening to attack with imaginary antlers, sailed over the fence and galloped away to the woods.

JODY SAID, "That were my fault, Ma. I shouldn't of left him. He were hongry, Ma. The pore feller didn't git enough for breakfast. You should of beat me, Ma, not him."

"I'll tear down all two of you. Now git down and pick up ever' one o' them peas and wash 'em off."

He was only too glad to do so. He crawled under the table and reached behind the kitchen safe and under the inside water-shelf and in every corner, to retrieve them. He washed them carefully and went to the sink-hole for extra water, to replace what he had used, and more. He felt entirely righteous.

"Now see, Ma," he said, "they's no harm done. Ary leetle harm Flag do, you kin depend on me to take keer of it."

Flag did not return until sunset. Jody fed him outside and waited to smuggle him into his bedroom after Penny and Ma were in bed. Flag had lost his fawn's willingness to sleep long hours and had been increasingly restless at night. Ma Baxter had complained that she had heard him tripping about in Jody's room or the front room several times. Jody has invented a plausible tale of rats on the roof, but his mother was skeptical. Perhaps Flag had had a sleep that afternoon in the woods, for this night he left his moss pallet and pushed open the rickety door of Jody's bedroom and wandered about the house. Jody was aroused by a piercing shriek from his mother. Flag had awakened her from a sound sleep by pushing his wet muzzle against her face. Jody slipped the fawn out by the front door before she should do a more thorough job of it.

"Now that ends it," she raged. "The creetur gives me no peace day or night. Now he cain't come in this house, no time, never no more."

Penny had kept apart from the controversy. Now he spoke from his bed.

"Your Ma's right, boy. He's got too big and restless to be in the house."

Jody went back to bed and lay wakeful, wondering if Flag were cold. He thought it was unreasonable of his mother to object to the clean soft nose against her own. He could never get enough of fondling the delicate muzzle, himself. She was a mean, hard woman and did not care if he was lonely. His resentment eased him and he went to sleep, clutching his pillow and pretending that it was Flag. The fawn snorted and stamped around the house most of the night.

IN THE MORNIENG Penny felt well enough to dress and hobble around the clearing, leaning on a stick. He made the rounds. He returned to the rear of the house. His face was grave. He called Jody to him. Flag had trampled back and forth across the tobacco seed-bed. The young plants were almost ready to set out. He had destroyed nearly half of them. There would be enough for the usual patch for Penny's own use. There would be no money crop, as he had planned, for storekeeper Boyles at Volusia.

"I don't figger Flag done it malicious," he said. "He were jest racin' back and forth and it were somethin' to jump on, was all. Now you go set up stakes all through the bed amongst the plants and all around the bed, to keep him offen the rest of 'em. I should of done it before, I reckon, but I never studied on him rompin' in that pertickler place."

Penny's reasonableness and kindness depressed Jody as his mother's rage had not done. He turned away disconsolately to do the job.

Penny said, "Now it jest bein' accidental-like, we'll not say nothin' to your Ma. Hit'd be a pore time for her to know it."

As Jody worked he tried to think of a way to keep Flag out of mischief. Most of his tricks he considered only clever, but the destruction of the seed-bed was serious. He was sure that such a thing would never happen again.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.
